

GERMANY OPENS ORIENT RAILWAY

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, Nov. 9.—Germany has already begun the shipment of heavy guns, ammunition and other war supplies to Turkey over the Orient railway, which was opened by the fall of Nish, according to a dispatch from Amsterdam today.

Terrific fighting continues in half a dozen different zones in Serbia. The Bulgarians claim to have inflicted heavy losses upon the Anglo-French forces south of Velez (Koprin), and west of the Vardar valley. However, the Bulgarian war office maintains silence as to the effect of operations, indicating that the Anglo-French-Serb forces are gaining ground.

In the north the German, Austro-Hungarian and Bulgarian forces continue their victorious sweep. The German forces of General von Gallwitz, which stormed Krushewatz, are now striking against the mountain positions of the Serbs west of Nish.

"Russian batteries of heavy artillery are being concentrated on the Rumanian frontier, and 200,000 Russian troops have been massed there," says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Athens. "Guns, munitions and other war supplies are already being sent to the Bulgarian frontier by way of the Danube."

Another dispatch from Athens says that Bulgarian and Turkish cavalry are approaching Ochrida and that the civilian population is fleeing into Greece. Ochrida lies on a lake of the same name on the Serb-Albanian border, just a few miles from the Greek frontier. It is due west of Monastir.

All dispatches, official and unofficial, indicate that the German allies hold nearly 20,000 of Serbia's 34,000 square miles of territory.

German military experts declare that the capture of 130 guns at Kraljevo has practically denuded the Serbian army in the north of artillery. The retreating Serbians were trying to haul the guns over the muddy mountain toward Novi Bazar, but the German long range guns opened killing the men and oxen that were hauling the Serb artillery.

Another junction of Austro-German and Bulgarian forces has taken place on the main line of the Orient railway north of Nish.

A telegram from Salonika states that the Serbians, before abandoning the Ziachar-Parchin branch of the Orient railway, blew up all the tunnels.

FOUGHT WITH HIS OWN REFLECTION

Monday evening a drunken man wheeling an empty baby carriage along John street attracted considerable attention especially as the man would lean over the carriage and in a soothing voice say "Don't cry dearie, don't cry." As the man approached and was passing the county building, corner of John and Crown streets, he happened to glance in the window of the Ulster County Laboratory and as the shades were drawn he saw his reflection in the glass and with a drunken curse he shouted "Get out of there, you son of a gun" and drawing back his fist he dashed it against the window, breaking the glass into fragments, and then with a satisfied grunt proceeded on down the street turning into Lucas avenue where he was overhauled by Policeman Shadler and placed under arrest. The drunk and the baby carriage were taken to the county jail where the man was locked up over night and the baby carriage left in the sheriff's office where it was identified and claimed by the owner this morning. The drunk was arraigned before Recorder Andrew Lang this morning and said his name was Arthur Faber and was employed on the Davis farm on Lucas avenue. Faber said that he took a drink occasionally but said he "must have taken a drink too much last night." He could not remember where he had gotten the baby carriage or of breaking the window or of being arrested. Said he "All I remember is that I took a drink and woke up this morning in jail." Recorder Lang sentenced him to pay a fine of $5 or five days in jail.

PETER SCHUYLER'S OUTING.

Twenty-fourth Annual Visit to Mr. Taylor in Port Ewen.

The following gentlemen, connected with the cigar factory of G. W. Van Slyke & Horton, manufacturers of the celebrated Peter Schuyler, together with their friends made their twenty-fourth annual visit to the home of Andrew M. Taylor, Port Ewen, on Sunday, where they were entertained at dinner. Those who enjoyed the outing were George W. Van Slyke and James B. Horton of Albany, William Van Slyke and Thomas Horton of Kingston, Charles Horton of New York, George Colden and William Taylor of Kingston, O. J. McKee of Ulster and Dr. E. F. Sibley of Kingston, friend of the above named gentlemen. The trip was made by automobile and after spending a most enjoyable day they returned to their homes.

St. John's Ladies' Attention.

All persons who have been preparing articles for the St. John's Church fair to be held at the parish house on Friday and Saturday of this week, or who have articles to contribute to the fair, are asked to take such articles to the parish house Tuesday afternoon so that the ladies may have them marked and ready for the "Bargain Sale," which will be the manner in which the sale will be presented. The chicken pie supper, prepared by Mrs. Daley will be served on Saturday evening, in the parish house.

Orange Crop Below Par.

The California orange crop this year will be from twenty to fifty per cent below normal. Big crops of lemons, olives and grapefruit are indicated.

Native of Germantown.

Miss Rachael Rockefeller, born in Germantown, 79 years ago, and a resident of Manhattan for twenty years, is dead.

Four Months in Jail.

Harvey Delamater, a well known character about town, was sentenced to four months in the county jail by Recorder Lang this morning on a charge of public intoxication. Harvey was arrested by Seth Jocelyn.

KITCHIN OPPOSES WILSON PROGRAM

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Nov. 9.—A fight against the election of Rep. Claude Kitchen as the Democratic leader in the house, to succeed Oscar W. Underwood, is threatened as a result of Kitchen's announcement of his opposition to the administration defense program.

While no one seriously believes Kitchen's election can be prevented, many Democratic members of the house who are here now, particularly the northern members who always have been only lukewarm to the North Carolina congressman's candidacy, today spoke of opposition to him as a manner of expressing their disapproval of his antagonism to the president's plans.

Prediction was made of a bitter attack by some northern Democratic members on the rule of seniority by virtue of which Kitchen will become majority leader of the house. Though quite powerless against the overwhelming majority of southern Democratic votes, several northern members are expected to register vigorous protest against this method of selecting the leader.

It became plain today that the defense plan will stir up one of the most bitter fights the house has seen for years if the Bryan followers, along with Kitchen and his supporters, were able to present enough of strength so as to make it necessary for the program to get many Republican votes to succeed. Administration officials are so confident, however, that the issue will be fought along strictly non-partisan lines that they still felt certain of its winning with the aid of the Republican defense advocates.

G. E. MAY OPEN MISSION STATION

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Kingston Local Union of Christian Endeavor the question of establishing a mission station in a section of this city not now covered by evangelical churches was talked over and the matter was referred to a special committee to investigate and report back.

The next quarterly rally of the union will be held in one of the downtown churches the latter part of January and it was decided to secure a prominent speaker to deliver the address of the evening. It was also decided to observe Christian Endeavor Day which falls on February 4, and it was suggested that the entire day be set apart by the various societies in the union and that in the evening the societies meet for supper in one of the local churches to be followed by a grand rally to be addressed by some speaker taking as his topic young peoples' work.

The organization of new societies was also talked over and it is hoped that several new ones will be reported. A social entertainment is also being planned to be held in the near future by local talent. The Christian Endeavor Society of the Reformed Church of the Comforter will visit the city home the latter part of this month and conduct religious services. The meeting was presided over by the newly elected president, W. W. Brady, Jr.

JOHNNY LAY THE MATCH.

Johnny Bruck, the seven year old son of Richard Bruck, was brought before Recorder Lang this morning in children's court. Johnny was a boy who set fire to a barrel of rubbish that stood alongside the incubator plant on Cornell street and but for the timely arrival of the fire department there might have been a serious fire on Sunday afternoon. Johnny said he was playing around the building with another boy whose name he did not know when the latter found a match and giving it to Johnny told him to set fire to the rubbish and Johnny did so. The recorder gave him a severe lecture and Johnny promised not to start any more fires.

French Steamer Torpedoed.

Paris, Nov. 9.—The French steamship, Yser, formerly the American steamer Dacia, has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine off the Algerian coast. The Dacia was originally a German ship. She was purchased by Edward N. Breitling, a New York millionaire, and sent to Germany with a cargo of cotton. On the way she was seized by a French warship and was later confiscated. Then her registry was changed to French and she was renamed the Yser.

Found a Bicycle.

Special Officer DeGraff has reported to the police the finding of a bicycle on upper Fair street on Monday evening. The make of the machine is a "Capitol." The owner placed it in the Wiltwyck Engine House.

AFRICAN TROOPS IN THE BALKANS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Milan, Italy, Nov. 9.—African troops have been sent to the Balkans to reinforce the Anglo-French army and they took an important part in the recent fighting south of Strumitza.

The famous French "75's" which have won the allies many successes over the Germans in France, are being employed against the Bulgarians with great success.

Terrific losses were inflicted upon the Bulgarians south of Strumitza in the recent battle there. Thousands of dead and wounded Bulgarians were left upon the field when the Bulgar army retreated.

The war correspondent of the Stampa in the near east sends the following account of one battle between Strumitza and Valandovo:

"On October 24, noon, the Bulgarians appeared on the hills overlooking the Strumitza station. General Bailloud occupied the heights on the eastern side of the station. The main line was held by French infantry and squares with chasseurs and African troops as reserves.

(Strumitza station lies on the Salonika-Nish railway line about eight miles west of the Bulgarian city of Strumitza. It has frequently been confused with the Bulgarian city of the same name in recent reports of fighting. Strumitza station is on Serbian soil.)

"The order of the day was: 'Keep to cover and take great care of your lives. Don't get yourself shot uselessly, which means that you shall preserve the strength of France and utilize it to good purpose. If at any moment it is necessary that I will let you know.'

"At 2 o'clock the first Bulgarian shrapnel burst over the station. The ground between Valandovo and Strumitza is stony and had been made soggy by rain. Four regiments of Bulgarian troops advanced across this space in close formation after the German fashion. They were led by bomb-throwers and Macedonian comitadjis or irregulars. Many of the officers in the first line were Germans.

"When a few hundred yards away from the one end of the French line there burst forth suddenly a hurricane of bullets. The Bulgarians were moved down in masses. The advancing line was bent, checked and twisted.

"Then the French '75's' were turned loose and sent a storm of shrapnel into the Bulgarian ranks with uninterrupted fury while machine guns crackled in horrible concert.

"The Bulgarian advance was immediately arrested. Not one out of the 400 or 500 Bulgarians who reached the first French line escaped.

"Of one entire battalion only thirty wounded men survived. They were made prisoners. In the meanwhile the machine guns and artillery continued pounding the enemy's positions until it was seen that the impetus of the attack was completely broken. The enemy's indecision was the prelude to absolute defeat. The French passed immediately from the defensive to the offensive.

"A French legion composed of two battalions of zouaves jumped out of their trenches and rushed at the enemy with the bayonet. The chasseurs and African troops followed and all fell upon the Bulgarians with the utmost fury.

"The Bulgars were chased out of their trenches and pursued toward the crest of the Plauspian mountains. They were compelled to abandon the dead and wounded and they also left a great number of rifles, two big guns and much ammunition in the hands of the French.

"By 7 o'clock the Bulgarians had crossed the frontier into their own country followed by the French who occupied the summit of hills on the frontier bringing their guns within range of the Bulgarian city of Strumitza. Since that victory the French have not been attacked in that region."

Church Bowling League.

Six teams have been entered in the church bowling league and the first game will be played on Wednesday evening, November 17. The teams entered in the league are from the Albany Avenue Baptist Church, Roundout Presbyterian Church, First Presbyterian Church, Clinton Avenue M. E. MISS DOROTHY WEBB, NOTED HORSEWOMAN IN NATIONAL SHOW.

New York, Nov. 9.—One of the most beautiful and most experienced horsewomen seen at the National Horse Show now in progress at the Madison Square Garden, is Miss Dorothy Webb, heiress, of Greenwich, Conn., New York and Newport.

Miss Webb has exhibited her prize saddle horses at all the prominent horse shows in this country and abroad for the past five years, numbering among her awards many first prizes. She is an enthusiastic sports-woman, and drives a racing automobile in addition to her spirited horses.

ATHLETIC BOOM IN LOCAL Y.M.C.A.

From now on athletics will be booming at the local Y. M. C. A. and arrangements are rapidly being completed for the formation of bowling, basketball and indoor baseball leagues to be started this month, under the direction of Physical Director Godfrey.

This evening a team of bowlers representing the local association in the New York State Bowling League will roll the first game on the association alleys this evening. The results will be sent into league headquarters at Syracuse. Kingston will be represented by Grove Webster, Jr., Charles DeForest, Theodore Wood, Louis Beeres and W. R. Bennett. Bowling will start at 8 o'clock.

There are now ten baseball teams and eight basketball teams entered in the Y. M. C. A. Church Indoor Baseball League and the Y. M. C. A. Church Basketball League. The churches having entered teams in the league are the Roundout Presbyterian Church, First Presbyterian Church, Trinity M. E. Church, St. John's Church, Church of Holy Spirit, Clinton Avenue M. E. Church, Wurts Street Baptist Church, Holy Cross Church, Albany Avenue Baptist Church. The first basketball game in the league will be played a week from this Saturday.

He Wanted Six Months.

Saturday evening three negroes entered the men's furnishing store of William B. Terwilliger, No. 21 East Strand, and while Mr. Terwilliger was selling one of the men a hat one of the others walked over to a counter on which lay several boxes of neckties. Thinking that Mr. Terwilliger was not looking his way the negro reached down quickly and nicked up two boxes of neckties tucked them under his coat. Each box contained about a dozen ties. With a quick step Mr. Terwilliger walked over to the negro and opened the latter's coat withdrew the two boxes at the same time saying "Maybe you don't know it but I have got authority to arrest you for stealing." The negro scratched his head reflectively and replied "Just as you say boss; I'd just as soon go up for six months." It is hardly necessary to say that Mr. Terwilliger was satisfied to let the two boxes of ties and allowed the would-be thief to depart.

Barbara Class Meeting.

The members of the Barbara Class of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church held a meeting on Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. when important matters regarding school and church came up for discussion and it was definitely decided to take action regarding some plans long under consideration.

DAY'S WAR NEWS AT A GLANCE

Washington—French government confiscated American steamer Housatonic. State department plans an immediate protest.

Berlin—Seven thousand Serbians and 50 cannon taken by Germans when Krusevac captured. Bulgarians captured Leskovac. Successes against Russians also reported.

Paris—Violent artillery duels occurred during night at various points on battle front. French steamer Yser, formerly American steamer Dacia, sunk by German submarine off Algerian coast.

Athens—King Constantine will issue royal decree dissolving parliament within few hours. General election will follow.

Constantinople—Turks destroyed one of allies' batteries on Gallipoli peninsula.

KINGSTON HAS NO MUNITION PLANTS

That Kingston's manufacturing plants are not in a position to turn out war orders for ammunition and there are no buildings in this city that can be used for that purpose was brought out at the meeting of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce held on Monday evening at the city hall when Secretary Canfield read several communications from large concerns desiring to open branch plants in Kingston to turn out war munitions or to turn over part of the large order to a local plant to manufacture. In all the cases Secretary Canfield said he had investigated and taken the matter up and found that there were no available plants in Kingston adapted to the purpose required.

Director R. E. Leighton, who has charge of the plant of the Universal Road Machinery Company in this city, was asked in regard to the situation and stated that his concern had had several propositions made to it to turn out shrapnel, but after an investigation had found that it would cost at least $20,000 to equip the plant with the necessary machinery used in the manufacture of shrapnel. Mr. Leighton said that if a concern was sure of securing more than one war order it might pay it to expend such a large sum but his concern had turned down the proposition. It was his opinion that no manufacturer in this city could handle these war orders.

One of the concerns that had written the Chamber of Commerce enclosed a blue print and specifications of the shrapnel they desired to manufacture.

The International Correspondence School wrote stating it would offer three free scholarships for a window decorating contest to be carried on under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. Director Herbert Carl's motion that the president appoint a committee of five to consider the matter was adopted.

The matter of better postal service between Kingston and cities on the other side of the river was discussed and Secretary Canfield was instructed to take the matter up with the superintendent of railway mail service. The secretary was also instructed to notify the secretary of the newly organized Hudson Valley Chamber of Commerce in regard to the matter.

The question of additional train service was deferred to the January meeting of the board.

Director Leighton called attention to the fact that the state police chiefs would hold their annual convention in Kingston next year and it was decided that the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce meet with the police board at the December meeting to discuss plans for entering the convention while in Kingston.

The board then adjourned. Those present at the meeting were President Kearney and Directors Kinsman, Burzovin, Schlesinger, Kinsman, Klock, Stelle, Everett, Bernstein, Barmann, Carl, Stock, Cannon, Dwyer, Cook, Decker, Connolly, Leighton and Gorman and Secretary Canfield.

Holy Cross V. East Kingston.

Wednesday evening at the Holy Cross parish house there will be a basketball game between East Kingston and Holy Cross. Game starts at 8:15 sharp, followed by dancing. On Saturday the Holy Cross team traveled to Ashokan and defeated the team of that place by a score of 12 to 11. The feature of the game was the close guarding of both teams. Line-up of the Holy Cross was as follows:

Declines an Appointment.

Supreme Court Justice Harry T. Kelloff of Plattburgh on Monday announced his decision to refuse an offer tendered to him by Governor Whitman to appoint him presiding justice of the appellate division of the supreme court for the third department, to succeed Justice Walter Lloyd Smith, who is the present presiding justice. Judge Kelloff also announced that the governor would appoint Justice John M. Kelloff to the presiding justice position within a few days. Justice John M. Kelloff is now a member of the appellate division.

OFFICIALS DISCUSS NOTE TO BRITAIN

Washington, Nov. 9.—Easily overshadowing all other international questions in importance, the probable relations between the United States and Great Britain growing out of the American note were today the subject of earnest discussion in state department and diplomatic circles. Now that the United States has served notice on Great Britain that her course in the past with reference to America's trade with neutral nations has been "unjustifiable and illegal" a repetition by Great Britain of any of the practices against which protest has been lodged could easily bring on a crisis.

Having warned the British government of the law governing the seizure of neutral shipping, the overhauling by the British of another vessel bound for a neutral port probably would lead the United States to demand disavowal of the act and an immediate cessation of such practices. Observers today declared that the American position could not be more adequately stated. Further discussion of the question would be fruitless, they aver, should Great Britain repeat her objectionable practices. If there should be another violation of American rights on the high seas it would be time, they say, for the United States to begin talking about "omitting no word of act" to preserve its rights.

The latest protest to Germany on the seizure of the American vessel Passof Balmaba by a German submarine on the grounds of illegal transfer from Canadian to American registry probably will not raise any serious question. In asking for the release of the vessel Ambassador Gerard was instructed to impress upon the German foreign office that the ship was virtually owned in the United States before her transfer and that all of her owners now are American citizens. Her release without prize court proceedings is expected.

It is also thought that the state department will accept the response received yesterday from the German foreign office denying that the German government had had any connection with the issuance of fraudulent American passports. In view of conflicting testimony in the matter, the American government probably will be satisfied with the formal denial by Germany of any official participation in passport frauds.

Nurses to Return Home.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Plans for bringing home nine young American women who have been serving as war nurses in Serbia were announced today by the American Red Cross. Arrangements have been made to have the party leave Belgrade Nov. 15. They will go to Athens and from there take a steamer for New York. Those returning are: Misses Edna Pfleiderer, of Bucyrus, Ohio; Helen Van Meter, Cleveland, Ohio; Margaret Murray, Columbus, Ohio; Pauline E. Klittke, New York; Nellie Scanlan, Buffalo, New York; Nellie Bundy, Buffalo, N. Y.; Lillian Narararo, Boston; Sophie Weber, Denver, Colo., and Mrs. Mattie Biddle, Denver, Colo.

Carranza Troops Succeeded.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Carranza troops have captured Hermosillo, Admiral Winslow, commander of the Pacific fleet, wireless the navy department today from his flagship, the San Diego, which is off the western coast of Mexico. Details of the battle in which the town was taken were not received.

Germans Fight Bulgarians.

London Nov. 9.—A telegram from Bucharest states that fighting broke out between Germans and Bulgarians for possession of Negotin, in north-eastern Serbia, and that 100 Bulgarians were killed. This is the first news of a breach between the Teutonic allies.

Allies Will Protest.

Paris, Nov. 9.—England, France and Russia are expected to protest to Greece against the presence there of German army officers. Dispatches long to the press, state that within the past 48 hours a number of German officers in mufti have arrived at Athens and are fraternizing with Greek military men.

William D. Brinnier, one of the attorneys for the defense in his cross-examination of Dr. Charles E. Townsend, a Newburgh surgeon, who was called by the plaintiff on Monday in the case of Arthur B. Merritt against the New Paltz, Hingham and Poughkeepsie Traction Co. for $2,000 damages for personal injuries, alleged to have been sustained when he was ejected from a car following a dispute with the conductor over fare, showed considerable "inside" knowledge of the human anatomy and fired questions right and left in affirmation of various statements regarding fractures of bones which he (the attorney) made. Dr. Townsend at the outset was asked:

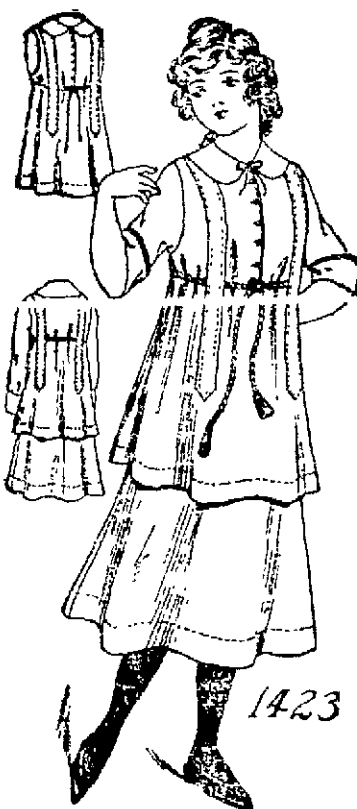

"You expect expert compensation?"

Mr. Townsend—"Yes."

Mr. Brinnier—"That is how much?"

Dr. Townsend—"One hundred dollars."

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1423—A Popular, Comfortable and Smart Style—Junior Dress.

This attractive girlish model has good style features. The blouse is made in the new "smock" style and may be plain or trimmed with the strap platts. The broad collar is in Quaker style. The sleeve in wrist length has a straight deep cuff. In short length a turn back cuff forms a neat finish. The sleeve is set into a deep armhole with no fullness. The blouse can be used as an over blouse, by omitting the sleeves. The three piece skirt is cut with stylish flare and ample width. It is finished with a waistband may be joined to an under waist if preferred. The style is good for combinations of wash or wool fabrics, for serge, taffeta, gingham, lawn, poplin, rep, gabardine, velvet, satin or corduroy. This model will make a splendid school suit. The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 12, 14 and 16 years. It requires 5 yards of 36 inch material for a 12 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

BETHANY'S NEW PASTOR.

Rev. V. D. Mattice Returns to Scene of Former Successful Work.

The Rev. V. D. Mattice has received an unanimous invitation to succeed the Rev. Dr. J. J. Dean at Bethany Chapel, corner of Washington avenue and North Front street, this city, and preached his first sermon on Sunday evening to a large and appreciative congregation. Mr. Mattice was a former pastor at Bethany, having occupied its pulpit for nearly four consecutive years, prior to Dr. Dean. It was during Mr. Mattice's former pastorate that the old "chapel" was found inadequate to meet the needs of the people in this section of the city, and so a new, beautiful and commodious house of worship was erected and dedicated. All will remember the impressive dedicatory services which were concluded by the Rev. Dr. Leeper, pastor of the First Dutch Church. The new building cost approximately five thousand dollars, and through the strenuous and untiring efforts of two Godly and devoted women, Miss Mary Van Leuven and Miss Shufelt, nearly every dollar of the new building's cost was at hand on the day of dedication.

"Bethany" is a sacred spot. Its ground is holy ground. People love to attend its services, and the faithful are always present. There is no church in Kingston that has a more important mission to fill or that supplies such a need. The session of the Sunday school which is large and well organized, and is presided over by its able and efficient superintendent, E. E. Deyo, meets every Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. While health conditions will not admit of an extended pastorate Mr. Mattice has consented to take up the work for the present, and has entered it with heart and vim, and will carry it on until those in authority shall be able to secure the right man for the spot.

Rondout Presbyterian Fair.

Arrangements are now completed for the coming annual fair, turkey dinner and salad supper to be given by the ladies of the Rondout Presbyterian Church on Friday of this week. The fair will open at 12 o'clock with the turkey dinner. There will be roast turkey, dressing and gravy, mashed potatoes and creamed onions; squash and cabbage salad; pickles, cranberry and celery; apple, pumpkin, lemon and mince pie; tea and coffee. There will also be ice-cream for sale. During the afternoon those who attend the dinner and fair will have an opportunity to visit the booth where flowers and plants will be for sale; the booth offering home made candy; the apron booth; a "Miss Mary's Garden," where only rare products will be for sale. During the afternoon there will be a gathering of the various circles of the church, which during the year have been earning money for the church, and the proceeds of their various efforts will then be turned into the treasury of the church, a unique and clever plan. Next on the program will be a salad supper, whereat chicken salad, potato puffs, salmon croquettes, celery, pickles, cranberry, cake, tea and coffee will be served, with ice cream for sale. The supper will be served from 5 to 8 o'clock. Directly after the supper a fine entertainment has been arranged, with the following excellent program.

This opportunity to hear Miss Los Kamp, the soloist of the church, whose splendid voice and musician-ship has made her so many friends, and who was given such a cordial reception at the artists' concert and musical festival last spring, will appeal to the music loving people of the entire community. Miss Maisterstock is very well and favorably known as a reader and the farce will afford a hearty laugh. It is a program will present a fitting finale to the annual fair of this church, which is always so popular.

His Honor's Observation.

"During an argument in court on Monday, in which one attorney intimated that another had been belated in presenting certain evidence or citing certain authority to the court, Justice G. D. B. PONCKHOCKIE UNION CHURCH ORGANIZED

The establishing of a church in any community is always a matter of import to the people of that community or part of the same, for it is the setting in motion of an influence whose potentialities are beyond estimate. This fact was thoroughly appreciated by the people of Ponckhockie and their friends last Sunday, which will long be remembered as the day when the Ponckhockie Union Church was first formally organized. There were about eighty persons at the 9:30 preparatory service which was held in the new building known as the Ponckhockie Chapel, but which will, hereafter, bear the name of church. These persons were assembled to receive the first instructions before the organization service. The church was filled with an earnest, expectant audience at the 10:30 o'clock service, when Rev. Charles W. Shelton, D. D. of New York, assisted by the artist pastor, Rev. S. W. Moot officiated. Music of the highest order was furnished by a quartet composed of Mrs. Osterhout, Miss Nellie Clark, William Anderson and M. F. Vreeland, while Miss Isabelle Gill sang a solo in a manner which showed her to be a rising young vocalist of no ordinary ability. In both the addresses by the pastor and the Rev. Dr. Shelton, an earnest appeal was made to all to look to God for guidance and direction, and the congregation was assured, that with God's help, this church would stand in this and succeeding generations for the upbuilding of Christian character and the advancement of God's Kingdom.

In response to the invitation extended to all who contemplated joining the church by letter, or on confession of faith, to take their places in the front of the church, a large portion of the congregation passed forward. This large number of devout worshippers, gathered in a circle about the pulpit, during the administration of the first baptismal service ever held in the edifice, when adults received the rite of baptism, presented a most impressive sight. After the members had been received to the church, three small children were baptized. Communion was then served to some hundred and forty persons, many friends in the neighborhood and other parts of the city, being present to attend this first celebration of this sacred sacrament with their friends. The forty-nine persons who joined the church by letter, represented fourteen different churches, many of which were out of town. Those who joined on confession of faith ranged in age from ten years, to over eighty.

The growth of this church body has been phenomenal. Some half dozen faithful workers banded themselves together in June, with the avowed object of ascertaining if there was a need for a church in this section of the city. It was wise to form a permanent church organization in Ponckhockie. From the first, the project seemed to move forward with an impulse which no opposition was strong enough to hinder or stop. A friend and member of a sister church had expressed doubts as to the wisdom of the undertaking, but after the service on Sunday morning, they expressed themselves as feeling that "Now it is done other than the hand of God."

The seating capacity of the church was taxed to its capacity in the evening, in spite of the fact that several extra chairs had been placed in the rear of the auditorium. If the attendance continues to increase, it will be necessary to open the gallery. It was impossible to entirely complete the details of the organization of the Ponckhockie Union Church last Sunday, so that any others who anticipate joining the church, and who were unable to do so last Sunday, will still have the opportunity to become charter members of the church by presenting themselves at the morning service this coming Sunday, November 14.

Candidates' Campaign Expenses.

The Ulster County Election Commissioners have been advised by the State Board of Elections, that the expense statements of candidates for city, town and village offices in the recent election are to be filed, according to law, in the offices respectively of the city, town and village clerks, not in the office of the county board. Only the candidates for county offices are to file their statements with the county board. The only county offices filled in the late election were those of county clerk and coroner. Candidates have ten days from November 2 in which to file their statements, the time expiring next Friday.

Battery of Allies Destroyed.

Constantinople, Via. Amsterdam Nov. 7.—Destruction of one of the "allies' batteries on the Gallipoli peninsula was reported in the following brief official statement issued by the Turkish war office today: "Our artillery destroyed a hostile battery in the sector of Anatara. Near Burnun Tepa we exploded one of the enemy's magazines. Trenches of the enemy were damaged by grenades. Near Sedd el Bahr a mine, exploded by the enemy, set off one of our mines and the allied trenches were badly damaged."

A Chintz Room for Daughter

In the average home the only room which the daughter of the house can claim as her own is her bedroom.

This should be as dainty as possible, signifying girlhood in all its freshness and beauty. Unfortunately many girls believe that daintiness costs money and pass it by on the plea of a small pocketbook. Daintiness, as a matter of fact, can be achieved for a very small amount of money, provided one is willing to spend some time and not a little thought on the decoration of one's bedroom.

Pink and blue have been the colors long favored as the young girl's, but the young person of decided character who feels that these pale tints do not reflect her vivid personality may choose in these very modern times eclect and futurist colorings and, with the aid of some of the new and artistic chintzes, may achieve a very stunning effect.

The furniture par excellence for the girl's room is finished in white enamel, and if you are not fortunate enough to possess this sort you can easily change what you have at hand by a can of white paint and one of white enamel. Painting is by no means easy work, but it is work which many a girl has accomplished successfully at home. It will be necessary first to purchase a can of paint remover so as to take off as much as possible of the original stain. Then give the pieces of furniture two or even three coats of white or cream paint and finally one of white or cream enamel. This should be allowed to dry thoroughly before an attempt to use it is made.

Now, if your bed is a wooden one you can produce a very quaint effect by pasting over the head and base boards chintz in a pretty design. This should be cut to fit the boards exactly and edged with braid to match the chintz, the whole being glued flat on to the head and base boards, or brass headed tacks placed at one inch intervals can be used to hold the chintz. Some girls have created a very pretty effect by cutting out flowers or birds from chintz and pasting these designs at conventional intervals on the base and head boards.

The dressing table can be made very pretty by the aid of chintz, and if you want a dressing table don't despair. Just make one. "How?" perhaps you ask. It is really the easiest thing in the world. If there is a fair sized table somewhere in the house which is not used for any particular purpose claim it as your own and use this as the foundation for your dressing table. First it must be coated with white or cream paint or enamel. Then fit a cover of the chintz over the top and sew a ruffle of the same around this flat cover. The ruffle should be only three or four inches long and should be quite full, so that it will fall prettily. Over the top of the table should be placed a thick piece of glass, which you can purchase and have cut to fit at any glazier's. This will be the most expensive item in the making of the dressing table—it will probably cost $4 or $5—but this money will be well expended, for it saves the top of the table and the chintz from dirt and wear.

Now comes the question of the mirror over the table. In the basement of any of the big department stores a cheap mirror can be purchased for $1.50 or $2. This will have a brown or imitation mahogany frame and will not be a thing of beauty. But the glass will be fairly good, and the frame can be covered. Remove the nails which hold the back of the glass and the front of it together, take off the frame and cover neatly with the chintz, gluing it flat to the surface and allowing an inch or two to overlap to the back on either side. When this is fairly dry put back on the glass and fasten the back to the front with the nails which were removed previously. Hang over the mirror and complete the charming effect by purchasing two white enamel candlesticks which should be topped by dainty shades made from the chintz.

To carry out the color scheme, drape the windows with this silk multi in a white or cream shade, at 25 cents a yard, and sew a band of chintz to the edge of the curtains, or use the mull curtains plain, edging with a bit of lace, and introduce the chintz effect in a short valance at the top of the window. Do not, however, leave over curtains of the chintz. They shut out too much light and air, and a bedroom needs as much of these as possible.

Egg Values.

American cooks use the egg white more than the egg yolk, but how true is the instinct of the European cook in preferring the yolk even if the white cannot be utilized the generally makes little fingers or some of the other so called "fanciful" with it can be seen by studying some of our most recent scientific books on foods.

An expert says of the egg yolk, "The yolk is a much more concentrated food material than the white, containing in a given weight about seven times as much energy, as well as larger amounts of protein and of the chief mineral matter."

A great European doctor who recommends yolks of eggs with oatmeal porridge has wonderful things to say about the food and curative value of eggs and especially recommends for anæmia spinach and eggs, instead of "taking expensive medicines and artificial preparations of iron."

Handicap of Ignorance.

Ignorance has no light, but error follows a false one. The consequence is that error, when she retraces her steps, has farther to go before she can arrive at truth than ignorance.—Colton.

QUIET WORKERS ACCOMPLISH MUCH

Probably one of the least talked about philanthropic organizations in this city is the "Needlework Guild," composed of women from the uptown churches and the Church of the Comforter. These women waste no time in meetings, holding only an annual meeting in the fall of each year. During the year the directors, each of whom secures ten women who will promise to give two new articles of clothing apiece, and those so engaged, prepare their garments. On Monday afternoon the annual meeting for the year 1915 was held at the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, when all of the needlework, hand work or machine, was gathered together. It was a most wonderful showing, for there were some $800 articles contributed, and that counts a "pair" of stockings, etc., as one article. Moreover, all of these garments were new. While it would be impossible to enumerate all of the gifts, some idea of what was given may be gathered from the following: 184 pairs of stockings, 67 handkerchiefs, 92 outing flannel petticoats for children, 33 undershirts for women, other underwear of every sort, aprons, baby clothing of every description, etc. There was also $18 in money given. Last year the number of garments given was 632, with contributions of about $10, which was considered phenomenal, and the increase this year is great. These garments are all for the deserving poor of our own city, and many a person, child or family, will in this way, through some friend in one of these churches, receive sorely needed help, which they would be unwilling to accept in any more public manner. No distinction is made as to color or creed on the part of the recipients; their need will be the only qualification. Many of the garments were distributed yesterday, and all that remained were taken to the home of the president, Mrs. Barnum, No. 137 Clinton avenue, where they may be obtained for those in need. Work will be immediately begun for the coming year, and the Guild will be only too glad to add new directors to its membership, thus increasing the scope of its activities. Any one so wishing to join should confer with Mrs. Barnum or Mrs. E. L. Angle, 137 Clinton avenue, the secretary of the Guild.

Church of the Comforter Notes.

Friday evening the Blues of the Wiltwyck Social Club of the Reformed Church of the Comforter will give an entertainment in the lecture room of the church. The program will be in two parts. The first will be devoted to an exhibition of magic by Fred Van Deusen and the second part will consist of an old-fashioned minstrel show. The performance will start at 8 o'clock. At the close a free-will silver offering will be taken. All friends of the club are urged not to forget the date and be present.

The Reds of the Wiltwyck Social Club of the Reformed Church of the Comforter will hold a food sale in the Dressel building, No. 456 Broadway on Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock. The sale will consist of home made bread, pie and cake and so forth. The committee, consisting of the Misses Langham, Lulu Hudler, Bessie Van Gaasbeek, and Amanda Castner, will be glad to receive orders in advance and also to deliver orders if requested.

Mr. Flanagan Passes.

Christopher J. Flanagan has been notified by the state board of law examiners that he successfully passed the recent examinations for admission to the bar, and he will be sworn in as an attorney before the appellate division of the supreme court at its present term. Mr. Flanagan is a graduate of Ulster Academy, having been a member of the class of 1911, and has since studied law in the offices of Brinlier & Canfield. He is a brother-in-law of Mayor Canfield.

Episcopal Convention.

When the one hundred and thirty-second convention of the Episcopal Diocese of New York assembles at the Cathedral, New York, next Wednesday morning, woman suffrage in the parishes will be one of the important questions on which it will be asked to pass opinion.

Church Yard Cleaned Up.

Employees of the street department were engaged on Monday in cleaning up the yard of the First Reformed Church preparatory to winter. A few wagonloads of leaves were raked up and hauled away. The trees in the yard now are practically free of leaves.

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, Nov. 9.—The brick school house, No. 1, of this village, was sold at public auction on Saturday last, and was bid in by U. E. Terwilliger for $2,850.

One of the land marks, on the corner of Market and Center streets, is being torn down, in order to make way for a new building, probably another Hebrew store. This is, or has been, the residence of John Gerard, one of the English glass blowers, who came to Ellenville quite a number of years ago.

The Rev. Walter S. Maines of the Von Vorst Reformed Church of Jersey City preached two very acceptable sermons to an appreciative audience in our Reformed Church on Sunday last.

W. A. Demarest of Brooklyn, N. Y., spent Sunday in town, stopping at the Wayside Inn.

Mrs. E. E. Count gave an address at the Epworth League service on Sunday evening, which proved very interesting.

The Rev. W. H. Moser is still drawing "packed house" at his Sunday evening lecture on "Protestantism versus Catholicism." People come from far and near, and of all denominations, to attend these services, and all seem greatly interested.

LUCERNE, HOME OF PEACE.

Swiss Town Toward Which Hopes for Peace Turn.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 9.—

"Lucerne, toward which, rumor has it, all peace paths of the world now take their way, and upon which the eyes of many troubled millions have been turned in the keen hope that the bright mountain city may soon attain the enviable fame of sending forth the call to cease hostilities in the world's greatest war, is described in a statement issued today by the National Geographic Society. Prince von Buelow's visit to the city strengthened peace rumors which have been growing in assurance during weeks past, and centered peace activities in Lucerne. The war primer telling of Lucerne reads:

"Lucerne, the capital of the Canton of Lucerne, situated in an amphitheater of mountains upon the exquisite Lake of Lucerne, is one of the most beautiful and most picturesque towns in Switzerland, and, in the land of the pilgrim's paradise, it has been one of the principal tourist centers. In tone, it is thoroughly cosmopolitan, for, during normal times, representatives of all the peoples of Europe and both Americas are continually passing through the place, to and from the famous St. Gotthard. More than 100,000 visitors were entertained in Lucerne each year in normal times, and, though a place of only 40,000 population, it possesses 70 hotels, many of them as pretentious as those to be found in New York and Paris.

"Lucerne, with the city, save where the wall is broken through by the torrent of the Reuse, which drains Lucerne Lake. The Pilatus range, Rigi, and the Alps of Uri and Engelberg frame the crystal waters at their feet. Lucerne is primarily a city of peace, because its support depends upon the good will, the prosperity and the leisure of nations, productive and at peace with one another. The annual 100,000 visitors pay the running expenses of the place and furnish it with plenty of pocket money for incidental luxuries. "Before the outbreak of the war, Lucerne was a resort patronized all the year around, by vacationists, those in search of winter sport, mountain climbers, by the infirm in need of bracing air and inspiring surroundings, and by the small army regularly bound for the passage of St. Gotthard's pass. The town, itself, is full of picturesque and historic values. The older part of the city is medieval, threaded by narrow, crooked streets and built up with ancient houses. Part of the old defenses are still standing, while the town hall is a survival from the 16th century. In it is now housed a museum rich in antiquities.

"Lucerne is conveniently situated for informal conferences between the warring nations, for it is neutral land almost in the heart of battle-torn Europe, and the only place equally accessible to all the larger combatants. In less than a day's time, representatives can gather here from London, Paris, Berlin, Rome and Vienna. More difficultly is in the way of the representative sent from Petrograd, but, for all practical purposes, Lucerne is the placid center around which Europe's cyclonic storms of war are raging in widening circles. As the hub of trouble and destruction, it is a fitting point from which to send out the suggestions of peace and reconstruction."

Railroad Through a Sahara.

After the first of next October, Delaware county will be entirely dry as a result of last week's vote on local option. A number of the towns have been dry for several years but there remained a few cases. After the first of October next the Ulster and Delaware railroad between Kingston and Oneonta will pass through only one wet town—the town of Kingston and there are no stops there.

Use for Eggshell.

A medical authority says the shell of an egg is used as an antacid, being better adapted to the stomach than chalk. The white of egg is an antidote in cases of poisoning with strong acids or corrosive sublimate. The poison will coagulate the albumen, and if these poisons be in the system the white of an egg, if swallowed quickly, will combine with the poison and protect the stomach.

Look Over Obstacles.

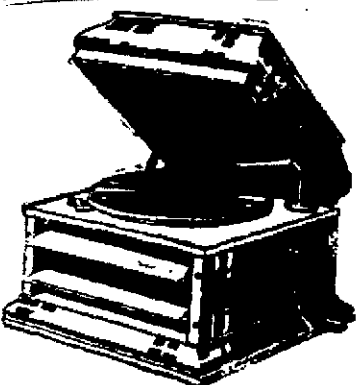

Anyone who rides a bicycle or runs a motor car knows that the way to go straight and avoid obstacles is to look past them down the road. By looking at the obstacles, one steers right into them in spite of oneself. So in life, when obstacles are ahead, one should look past them. Keep the eye on the right road, and so win past and forward.

Apples Always Valued.

It is known that excellent apples were produced in ancient Greece and that as far back as the time of Homer they were regarded as one of the precious fruits. They were the favorite dessert of Philip of Macedon and of Alexander the Great. It is said that in the latter's household there was a strict order that apples should be served at every meal.

BIBLE SOCIETY AT NEW PALTZ

County Organization Holds Its
Ninety-ninth Annual Meeting—
Address Delivered by the President, Judge Clearwater.

The Ulster County Bible Society, which is the oldest Bible society in America, and next to the First Dutch and the New Paltz and a few other old churches, and Kingston Lodge, No. 10, the most venerable institution in Ulster county, is holding its ninety-ninth annual meeting in the Dutch Reformed Church at New Paltz this afternoon, where Judge Clearwater, its president, delivered the annual address. Among the presidents of this association have been the Honorable Thomas Cornell, A. Bruyn Hasbrouck, president of Rutgers College; Major L. A. Sykes, Henry H. Reynolds, Colonel George W. Pratt, Archibald Russell, General Joseph S. Smith, the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Stitt, Gilbert DuBois, of Ellenville; Jeremiah Russell, of Saugerties; Cornelius Battelle, of Saugerties; Walter B. Crane and James O. Merritt. Judge Clearwater's address is as follows:

Associations for extending the circulation of the Bible date from the organization of the society for promoting Christian knowledge founded in 1698. In 1705 the King of Denmark established the society for sending missionaries to India, and in 1709 the society for promoting Christian knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland was formed at Edinburgh. The Moravians founded a missionary society in 1732, and Dr. Doddridge and James Hervey founded the Book Society for promoting religious knowledge among the poor of London in 1750. The first great association, however, which had for its purpose the single object of disseminating the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament was the Naval and Military Bible Society, established in 1780, the work done by which in the army and Navy Great Britain has been enormous. In 1804 the British and Foreign Bible Society, which is the greatest agency ever devised for the diffusion of the Bible, was founded, and it still exists with the entire world for its field of action. It is still, as it has been from the beginning, a great Bible society of the world. The Edinburgh Bible Society, the Scottish Bible Society, the National Bible Society of Scotland, although in many senses independent organizations, really are auxiliaries of the great British and Foreign Bible Society. In America the Philadelphia Bible Society was organized on the 12th day of December, 1808, and the Ulster County Bible Society, the next Bible society organized in America, came into being in October, 1816. It was followed by the American Bible Society, which was organized in New York on the 8th day of May, 1817, thus it is that our own society not only was the second society formed in America, but also the first of the American Bible Society.

A remarkable difference, however, between the work of the Bible societies in America and in England is that in England the right to print the Bible is a monopoly of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. While in America any one may print the Bible, although the facilities of the American Bible Society are such that it can afford to print it upon better paper and at less cost than can individual publishers. While there are several versions, the world adheres as a rule to the authorized or King James version and of that version the British and Foreign Bible Society has put into circulation $2,000,000 Bibles at an expense of $47,000,000, every penny of which has either been contributed voluntarily by the people of Great Britain, or has been given by bequests of citizens of the British Empire. It was that society which first initiated the practice of appointing agents, both at home and abroad, to investigate local requirements, and supply information for the guidance of the committee, and to suggest the best means of carrying out the great purposes of the society. It also inaugurated the system of establishing depots for the sale of the Scriptures, and opened such depots in England, Scotland and Ireland, and in the colonial dependencies of the empire. A peculiarity of this great society is that it does not encourage the gratuitous distribution of Bibles. It acts upon the principle that what costs nothing is regarded by the recipient as of but little value, whereas if a person pays even a small sum for a Bible, it is more highly thought of, and more carefully preserved.

All the great Bible societies of the world are at this moment bending their energies to the introduction of the Bible in India and in China. The organization of the great societies in India is upon a scale, and with a completeness that is said not to be rivaled by any business organization in the world, and it is now hoped to effect a similar organization in China, notwithstanding the Chinese republic recently have ordained that the religion of Confucius is the state religion of that republic. Contrary to the general notion, the great rulers of the earth have been most liberal contributors to Bible societies, none being more generous than the various emperors of Russia, where the first Bible society was established in 1812, under the presidency of Prince Galitzin, and within the last ten years upwards of seven and a half million of copies of the King James version have been put in circulation in that republic. A rather sinister fact is that while during the Franco-Prussian war there was a tremendous demand for the Bible in the armies of both France and Prussia, during the present European war the demand has been insignificant, a fact which has greatly astounded and depressed the officers of the great Bible societies of Christendom. During the Franco-Prussian war the Emperor of Germany became a member of the great Prussian Bible Society, and a liberal subscriber to its funds, and the Emperor of the French outdid him in his liberal subscriptions.

One of the most interesting events in connection with the circulation of the Bible is the very remarkable contribution to Biblical literature due to the liberality and public spirit of a distinguished descendant of one of the original patentees of New Paltz, Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, Michigan, who, as you all know, is a lineal descendant of Hugo Freer, one of the original patentees. To Mr. Freer, who spent the last summer in Ulster county, and who left Kingston on the 4th of November for his winter home in California, the world is indebted for what is known as the Washington Manuscript of the Synoptic Gospels. These four manuscripts were bought by Mr. Freer of an Arab dealer named Ali in Gizeh, near Cairo, on December 19th 1906. The manuscript is written on parchment of unusual thickness and excellent quality. It has suffered considerably from much wear and exposure. When first examined, the leaves were very brittle, especially on the edges, a condition doubtless due to their having been so dried and baked by sand and sun for many years. It, however, has grown in strength and pliability since it has been kept in a place where changes in temperature and moisture are guarded against, and it can now be used without damage if handled with care. The parchment is mostly sheepskin, and has been yellowed badly with age, yet in spite of this, it is still rather transparent so that the writing on the opposite side of the leaf is often visible. There are 187 leaves, or 372 pages. The manuscript is divided into twenty-six quires. The ink is dark brown, the writing is in one column of thirty lines to the page. The lines are ruled carefully and regularly. The number of letters in a full line varies between twenty-seven and thirty. The letters are what in palaeography are called uncial. That is, they are of a form found in manuscripts from the fourth to the eighth century, and are large, of nearly uniform size, greatly resembling modern capital letters, but of greater roundness.

The only hint as to the origin of these manuscripts is found in the manuscripts themselves, which seem to connect them with the Church of Timothy in the Monastery of the vine dresser, which is located near the third pyramid of Gizeh, and it is the opinion of Biblical scholars and of experts in palaeography that the manuscripts were written in the fifth and sixth centuries. In addition to the manuscripts of the Synoptic Gospels, Mr. Freer is also the owner of an early manuscript of the books of Deuteronomy and Joshua. An interesting fact in connection with these manuscripts is that the variation between that and the Hebrew and Greek text from which the King James version of the Bible was translated is very slight, and they thus tend to confirm the conviction of the world as to the genuineness of the sources of the originals from which that translation was derived. Mr. Freer with princely liberality has had the text of all the manuscripts, the four Gospels and Joshua and Deuteronomy reproduced in facsimile in the most sumptuous style, and has presented a superb copy of the entire work to the two hundred great universities and libraries of the world for which he has received the thanks not only of all the great universities and libraries, but also of the Pope of Rome. So modestly has Mr. Freer done this that I greatly doubt whether any word of his beneficent contribution to the literature and history of the Bible has ever reached the ears of the members of this church which his ancestor helped to found over two centuries ago, and in the old burying ground of which he lies buried with his fellow patentees who came here as exiles in order that upon the banks of the Wallkill they might enjoy that civil and religious liberty which was denied them in the land of their nativity. Important to Biblical students and to the world as this is, it is a small part of what Mr. Freer has done for the cause of religion, letters and art, and it is a grateful as well as a precious thing in this church and village of his ancestors to make this public acknowledgment of his public spirit and beneficence.

I have spoken of these wider fields in order that the members of this society and the thousands of the residents of Ulster county who should be members of it, but are not, may be reminded that the circulation and diffusion of the Bible is a part of the great work of civilization and humanity, and there are few fields where the dissemination of the word of God is more needed than right here in Ulster, where during the past year our efficient and indefatigable secretary has visited all the rural districts of the county and is compelled to report to us that many localities are absolutely destitute of Bibles; that in many school districts in the county there is no religious service, and there are some entire townships in the majority of the day schools in which the Bible is not read, nor do the pupils attend any Bible or Sunday school. It is a sinister and menacing fact that our investigations show that many of the young people of this county are growing up to womanhood and manhood with but little if any religious instruction, and we are forced to the conclusion that there is a larger missionary field here in Ulster than in almost any other county in the state of New York. The churches in Ulster are doing what they can, but for some reason entirely beyond our grasp and understanding, they do not seem to reach the young. It is the hope of this society to place at least one copy of the Bible in every home in the county which now is without one, and a copy certainly should be within reach of every child within the limits of Ulster. We have in our possession a list of over one thousand children who do not own and have not access within the circle of their families to a Bible. When we consider the important contributions made by the people of Ulster within the last twelve months to the relief of the citizens of Belgium and Northern France, we feel justified in asking at least a modest contribution to the cause we have so much at heart. We cannot but recall St. Paul's message to his beloved Timothy: "From a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus," and humbly cultivating the Pauline philosophy, we commend it not only to our own members, but to the ninety thousand people who make up the population of the county of which all of us are so justly proud. All of you as students of the Bible are familiar with the Biblical account of the splendors of Jerusalem, Babylon, Nineveh, Ephesus, Tyre, Sidon, Antioch and Corinth, and as students of history you know of the only less magnificent pomp of Memphis, Heliopolis, Thebes, Buxastis, Elephantium, Troy, Rome and Carthage, and you must often have asked yourselves why has all the radiant grandeur of those resplendent cities disappeared beneath the sifting dust of centuries. One answer applies to all of them—the decay of spirituality, and of discipline, the greed of conquest, and the lust of pleasure, and precisely as has that decay characterized the disappearance of the cities of the past, so in the course of the ever revolving cycles will it mark the decadence of every nation, every city, every community which sacrifices the spiritual for the material, and the austerity of discipline for the enjoyment of pleasure. As we look about us in our own wonderful land, we may well ask whether there be not reason for us at least occasionally to stop and ponder the lessons of the past. Is there in this second decade of the twentieth century the same reverence for the Bible and for righteousness that characterized the second decade of the nineteenth century, or even its fifth decade; do we of this generation preserve even the discipline under which we were reared, and which characterized the manner of our bringing up; is not it true that there is a great lack of discipline in every department of life in this country? Instead of the stories of the Bible with the grandeur of their lessons, is not the time of the rising generations and even of the present generation, dissipated and wasted upon reading so frivolous as not to be worthy of the name of literature? It is in no spirit of censoriousness that these questions are asked, for they are not being asked alone by the president of the Ulster County Bible Society, but are being asked by thoughtful men and women throughout the length and breadth of this country, for the reflecting mind must be impressed with the depressing truth that there has been a distinct lowering of American ideals and a subtle vulgarization of American thought; that the standards of life have been cheapened, and that the omnipresent thought of the young is pleasure. Are we not forgetting in our worship of success and of the material that character is the thing that counts, and that if the free institutions of America are to be continued and perpetuated, they only can survive as the character of the American people justifies their continuance and survival.

It seems to me, as before I have had occasion to say, that there has been a marked disappearance of that reserve, that spirit of restraint which tended to the elevation of the citizen, and that in its train has come that influx of sensuousness, that receding of religion, that abandonment of Biblical teaching, that forsaking of the Bible, that longing for amusement, that craving for joy, even with an erotic touch, that grasping for anything which tickles the senses, that dizziness which has introduced vaudeville on the stage and in daily life, and that with it also has come a more sinister trend. The teachers of our young gradually are abandoning their belief in discipline, their adherence to the elevating refinement of moral influences, permitting a lack of training and insubordination under social authority, and a disregard and disobedience of moral instruction which has created an irritable impatience of control, an impatience which makes itself markedly felt in the public schools of the country, and an impatience which rapidly is becoming a menace to the social safety. It is against these influences and this trend that the Ulster County Bible Society entering upon the hundredth year of its existence, should set itself, and should commend to the people of Ulster that book which consoles sorrow and assuages pain, which brings gladness to eyes which fall with weakness and fill with tears, which aches for the dark house and the long sleep; that book which if everything else in our language should perish, would alone suffice to show the whole extent of its beauty and its power.

ALBANY DOCTOR Makes Wonderful Cures

DR. SWINBURNE OF ALBANY.

Will be in Kingston

FRIDAY, NOV. 12th
AT 340 BROADWAY

A Remarkable Cure of Castleton Woman

Mrs. John Vanderwolf, of Castleton, N. Y., was an invalid for over two years. Doctors said she had Bright's Disease, disorders and heart trouble. There seemed no hope for her case and she was confined to the bed for over a year. On the 12th of March, 1912, Dr. Swinburne, of Albany, was called to see her and by a careful examination found that the other doctors were mistaken in their diagnosis. Dr. Swinburne assured her she could get well. Today she is enjoying good health and able to look after her house work and social duties.

Amsterdam Fireman Cured of Rheumatism.

Henry Cole, of Steamer 2, Fire Company, of Amsterdam, was so crippled from rheumatism that he had to give up work and could only get around with the aid of crutches. After treating a long time with several doctors without satisfactory results he became much discouraged and thought there was no hope for him. His attention having been called to the wonderful work Dr. Swinburne was doing, he decided to make one more effort to obtain relief. To Mr. Cole's great astonishment he found after taking Dr. Swinburne's treatment one month he had no further use for his crutches and after three months' treatment was entirely cured. He is now at work and enjoys perfect health.

Consumption Cured.

Floyd Moore, of Fultonville, N. Y., had suffered a long time with chronic cough, loss of weight and shortness of breath and the local doctors had failed to give him relief. They claimed he had consumption and could not get well. Hearing of Dr. Swinburne he decided to make a last effort to obtain relief, with the result that after five months' treatment he is entirely cured and able to work every day.

Schenectady Boy Cured of Fits.

A remarkable cure is that of Julius Kuger, son of Mrs. H. Martin, of 706 Vail Place, Schenectady, N. Y. He suffered for a long time from attacks of convulsions, which had become so severe that he often had three or four a day. He had been treated by several of the best local doctors without relief and steadily grew worse. Seeing Dr. Swinburne's announcement that he cured cases considered incurable by other doctors, Mrs. Martin decided to see Dr. Swinburne about her son's case with the result that after one month's treatment the spasms were entirely controlled and after three months' treatment the boy was permanently cured.

Another Remarkable Case in Schenectady.

Miss H. Robertson, of 24 Thompson street, had severe stomach trouble, also diagnosed as ulcers of the stomach by her local doctors, and an operation was advised, but after two months' treatment with Dr. Swinburne she is able to eat all ordinary food without distress, is now feeling fine and has gained 18 pounds in weight.

"Something For Nothing"

Sane men are convinced that there isn't such a thing as "something for nothing." Sometimes, however, storekeepers look on the manufacturer's newspaper advertising somewhat in this light.

The manufacturer is spending money to benefit them. But the more alert realize that they can double and treble the benefits of the manufacturer's investment by SHOWING THE GOODS.

The manufacturer's advertising in the newspaper and the GOODS in the window bring business. Don't let the manufacturer lift all the load—do your part.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

William Natzke, a city man who owns a farm of ten acres in the Chicago district, is giving a good demonstration of intensive agriculture and successful marketing. Natzke raises a variety of produce and sells direct to consumers. He has a family trade in the towns near him and gets full retail rates for all the supplies he can produce. The customers receive fresh goods and fair treatment, both sides being well pleased with the arrangement.

It is fun to make money from the land," Natzke said. "My wife and daughter help me to raise the produce and to wash it and pack it neatly in boxes or baskets. We make our work a pleasure. What we are doing others can do. City people can make money on little farms and enjoy life while they go along."

Although there are many ten acre farms around Chicago, on which the owners earn $100 to $200 an acre there are not many of them near the smaller cities. Farms of 100 to 200 acres are common through the dairy and corn sections of the state. Perhaps the majority of them are 200 acres or larger. The average of farms in the whole state is 120 acres, but in the dairy regions they are considerably above the average. By modern methods of ag-venture the owners of ten acre tracts are accomplishing as much as those on the big places.

A farm of 200 acres is capable of supporting in comfort twenty or more families, instead of one or two, and with a reduction of acreage and more thorough productive methods, food will be produced for the increasing population of this country. Much of the farming now is slack and wasteful. It takes a great deal more help than is usually kept to properly work the average place, and as farms are cut down in size and owners multiply there will be greater absorption of labor and more general prosperity. The steady advance in prices for commodities makes modern farming a paying proposition. Business system and energy will add to the good results which are being gained. Better marketing is a great need with nearly all farmers, and city men will help to work out this problem.

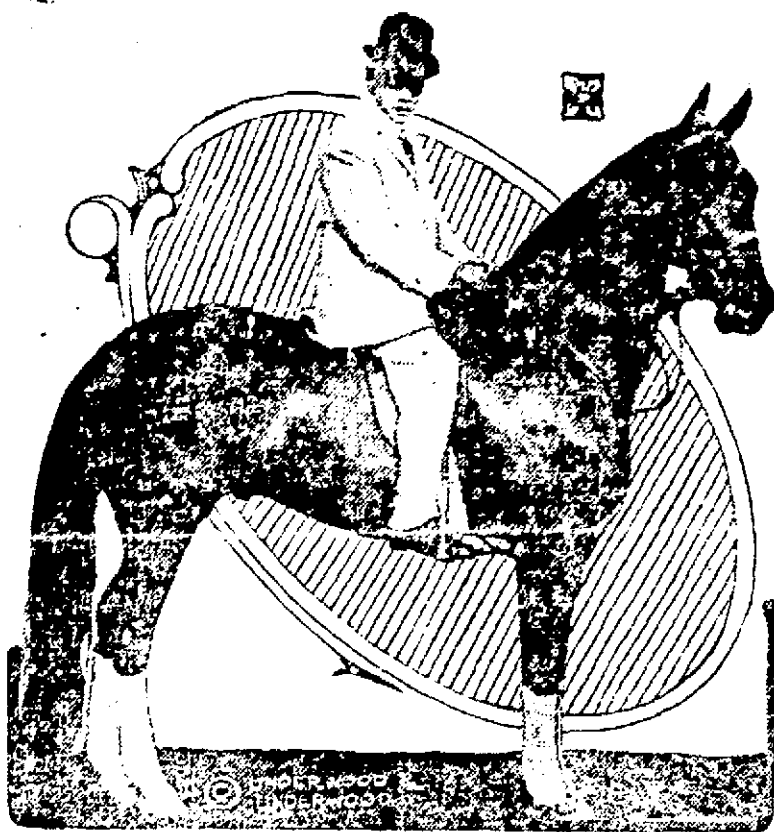

For the present the owners of small farms close to a town can do as Mr. Natzke is doing. The provincial towns, like Elgin, Aurora or Joliet, or even the villages of 1,000 to 3,000 population, offer good marketing opportunities. It is feasible for producers to supply goods direct from the farm to the town family. It is thought by many that owners of large places some distance out cannot succeed in private marketing. In other words, it may not be possible to market all farm products direct to consumers. This is an unsolved problem and will take years to work out. Those who produce on a large scale, using 100 to 200 acres, may conclude that it is better to sell to dealers.

Those who become expert as truck gardeners take their land do double duty every season, raising two or three crops of vegetables between April and November. Illustrations of this intensive farming can be seen on the little places around Chicago. Mr. Natzke raises success in growing vegetables. After taking off the earlier crops, such as lettuce, peas, radishes, onions, etc., he starts cabbage, tomatoes, celery, peppers, beans and sweet corn. There are many of the most profitable vegetables that can be grown quite late in the season, enabling the gardener to get three crops from the land. This sort of thing takes good tillage and lots of horse and manure. When the owner begins to prosper he can afford to erect a greenhouse, especially if he has good help around him. It is fortunate to have some reliable labor in the family, but in all cases it is best to know just what help is available for the periods of heaviest production, when vegetables and fruits must be gathered and marketed without delay. A greenhouse enables one to grow flowers and truck the year through.

He Was Superstitious.

"This is the twelfth time I've called about this bill," began the collector. "I hope you won't call again," said the debtor. "I'm a bit superstitious about the number thirteen, and I'm afraid something might happen to me or the other of us."

In all the world there is no faster saddle horse than Uhlan, the famous beauty owned by C. K. G. Billings. Uhlan, holds the world's trotting record, having covered a mile in 1 minute 54 1/2 seconds. Mr. Billings paid $20,000 for the horse.

Mr. Billings, who has the veteran trainer of thoroughbreds, Charles T. Patterson, in England, buying yearlings for next season's racing about Washington, Baltimore and New York, is going to bring back the story of the Old Dominion as a breeding place for thoroughbreds," said John Manahan of New York the other day to a Washington Post correspondent. "Mr. Billings never thought of breeding thoroughbreds until he became the owner of the Curis Neck property below Richmond, developed by the late Carl Sont. One of the things Mr. Sont did at Curis Neck was to establish upward of a thousand acres of alfalfa. It is the intention of Mr. Billings to turn under part of this alfalfa and establish bluegrass pasture. He expects to recruit his stud from the stallions and mares he has purchased abroad through Patterson and by purchases in this country. Already he is interested in the Peap o' Day stallion Cock of the Walk and he has half a dozen mares of American stock.

"Whether his attempt to grow bluegrass on James river land turns out well or not, it is a certainty that he will produce race horses at Curis Neck. Bluegrass pasture is well enough, but it is not absolutely essential to the production of the thoroughbred. There is none at Harry Payne Whitney's Brookdale farm in Monmouth county, N. J. Monmouth county is celebrated for its potatoes. Yet Mr. Whitney's stud has been the most successful in this country these three or four years. Moreover, the late Col. William R. Johnson raised good race horses a few miles to the southward of Mr. Billings' place before the war, and more recently the late Virginia Bradley bred the American derby winner, Robert Waldell, twenty or thirty miles down the river in Charles county. Mr. Billings will find a substitute for bluegrass if it develops that the Curis Neck stud must have one, no matter what it costs, for he does not stop when he sets out to do something and, being a man of wealth, he does not have to bother about the cost."

NEW CHAMPION GOLF PLAYER

Robert Gardner, Young Yale Graduate, Recently Walked Off With Title at Detroit Tournament.

Another new champion has arrived with the victories of Robert Gardner of Chicago, the young Yale graduate, who recently walked off with the crown of the United States Golf association, at Detroit, Mich. Gardner qualified to play J. G. Anderson, the Eastern player, by defeating Marston in a game that hinged on an 18-inch shot. These tiny little pushes probably looked to Marston as hard as hitting a dime with a sledge hammer, and Gardner, for his part, was quite satisfied to win.

In his last match the Chicago man showed the same skill, and, after a close and very exciting battle, finally conquered the last man that stood between him and the championship.

Switch Baseball and Football.

Every spring the baseball players kick because it is too cold for baseball, every fall the football players kick because it is too hot. Why not have the representative of these two sports get together and arrange to swap seasons? A 4500 foot temperature is better for football than an 8500 foot temperature, and the converse is equally true.

Under the Second Empire

By JOHN TURVILLE

Henry Hitchcock after being graduated from a medical college in America went to Paris, which was then the center of medical science of the world, to complete his education. That was in the days of the second empire, and Paris was a gay city. An acquaintance with one of the American branch of the Bonaparte family who had been summoned by Napoleon III. to join him on his accession to the throne of France gained Hitchcock an introduction to the court circle.

One evening during a ball at the Tuilleries the American was snatching through the apartment, crowded with the new aristocracy of France. A couple, an elderly man, highly decorated, and a young girl, approached him.

The man was coarse looking; the girl was comely and refined. They seemed ill matched, and, while the man appeared from his expression to court the girl's favor, she was plainly ill at ease in his company. In advance of Hitchcock walked a young man, who on meeting the couple bowed ceremoniously. His salute was returned by a glance from the girl that clearly bespoke love. Her companion returned the salute with a malignant scowl. Since the young man's back was toward Hitchcock, his face was not visible to him.

The doctor drew his inference, which was by no means doubtful. The older man had come between the young lovers.

This was the theme of the story; the story itself was not manifest.

The next day Hitchcock's Bonaparte friend called upon him and asked him to act as attendant surgeon at a duel. The principals were of high rank, one of them being an intimate friend of the emperor. The affair was to be kept secret, and Hitchcock was summoned because he was a foreigner and there was less danger of its leaking out through him than a Frenchman. He agreed to serve, promising to be present at a spot in the Bois de Boulogne the next morning at dawn.

On reaching the ground he found the principals masked. They fought with foils, and one was severely wounded. After binding up the wound the doctor got into a carriage with his patient and drove to his apartments.

Unmasked, the wounded man revealed the face of a person of twenty-one or twenty-two years of age. Hitchcock watched over him during the morning, when, believing him to be out of danger, he left him. Returning at night, he found him kneeling by his patient's bedside.

Her figure was very youthful, while her companion, who stood apart, appeared to be an elderly person. The latter wore a mask on her face, the former had taken one off, but bearing the doctor's footsteps hastily replaced it. Then, rising, she turned, hesitated, put out her hand to the patient as if for an embrace, and, with a sudden pallor came over his face, she started. Hitchcock saw it, too, and sprang to the bed, pulled down the covers and discovered a fresh hemorrhage.

"A cloth!" he cried.

Through excitement at receiving his visitor or from other cause the wound had begun to bleed afresh. The doctor stopped the flow, then turned. A young girl whose mask lay on the floor stood before him.

She gave no sign of having seen him before, and he controlled an impulse of recognition.

"It's all right, doctor," said the patient. "Since you have come to know me and now have seen the face of this young lady I suppose we shall have to take you into our confidence. When one possesses half a secret it is unsafe to keep from him the other half."

"Not now," interrupted the doctor; "wait till you are entirely out of danger. Your secret is safe enough as it is."

The young man was Count Victor Bonaparte, a scion of the old French nobility, and was the person who had seduced the couple at the Tuilleries ball. He was in love with Louise, the granddaughter of Napoleon I. The man with whom the count had fought was the Duke de —, a Bonaparte title. The emperor had arranged a marriage between the duke and Louise, his grace having been of great use to him in executing the coup d'etat by which he had seized the crown. Napoleon was not averse to marriages between the members of his family and the old nobility of France, but the duke had set his heart on Louise and would not be gained. The count and the duke had naturally become antagonistic, and the antagonism had ended in the duel. Both principals feared that would result if he should hear of the encounter, and arrangements were made to keep it a secret in case there should be no fatal result. Louise heard that her lover was dangerously wounded and with a friend visited him secretly.

The count recovered, and about the same time the war between France and Prussia broke out. The lover went to the war, and on his return, the emperor having been deposed, there was no one to oppose his marriage with the girl he loved. The Napoleonic dynasty has never since been restored to the sovereignty of France, nor have the royalists. The pair lived long in France, and their grandsons are now officers in the French army.

Not a word of satisfaction.

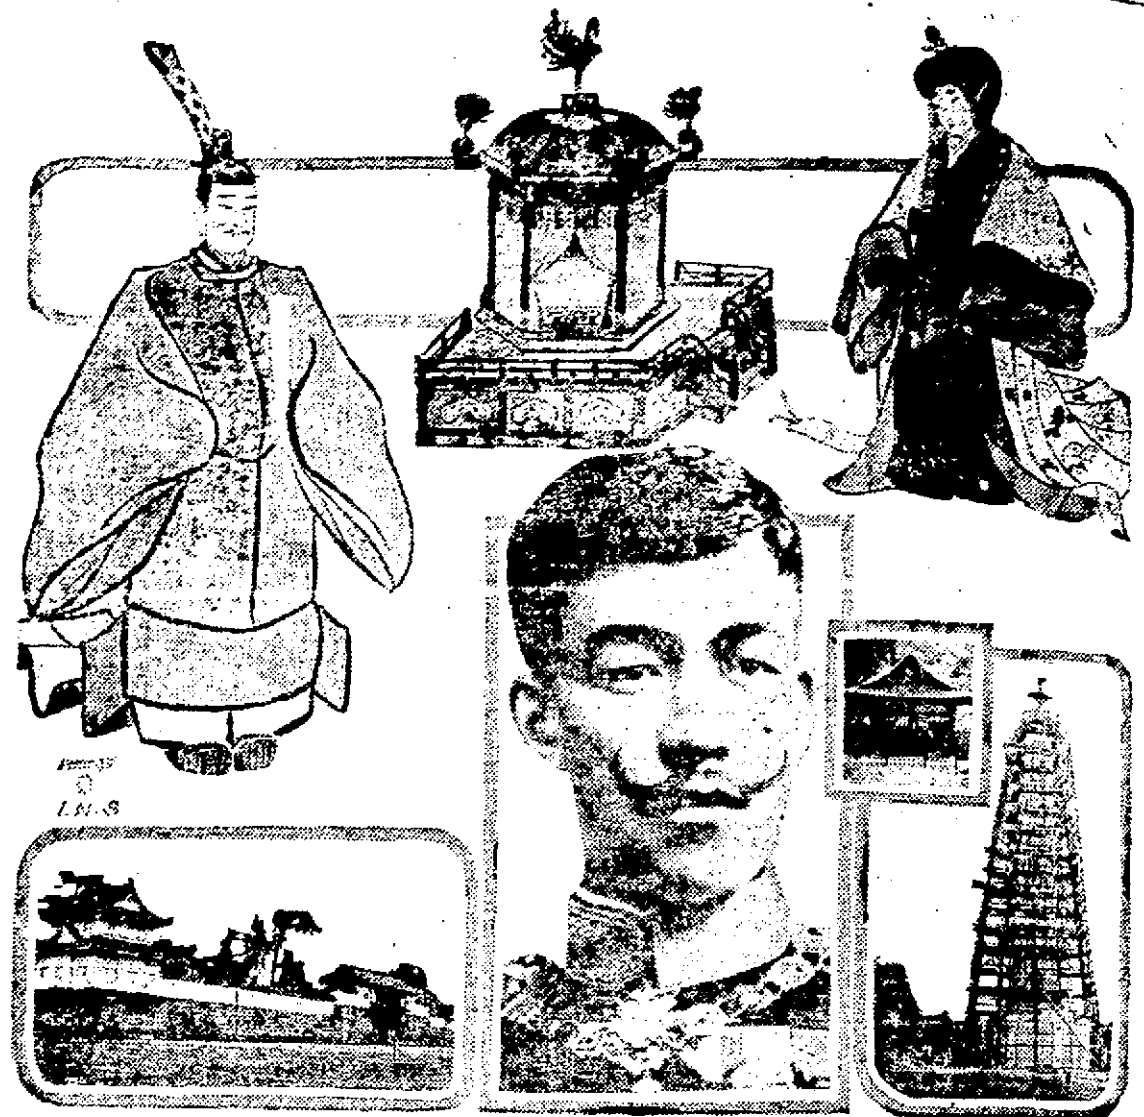

If you feel that it is better for all concerned that the older fellow have the best things in this life, well and good. However, a man cannot say he is tired a real life if all he has been to sit down and watch other people work and become better.

JAPANESE EMPEROR STARTS FOR CORONATION CEREMONIES.

Tokio, Nov. 9.—Today Emperor Yoshihito and the Empress left Tokio for Kyoto for the beginning of the coronation ceremonies which will last for ten days. The actual coronation takes place on November 15, but the many rituals leading up to the coronation will make the time from now until then a particularly busy one for the emperor. Banquets in which a specially distilled rice wine is used, ceremonies of thousands of years old, Shinto prayers and magnificent court levies will make the ten days a holiday time for all Japan.

At the left is shown an original Japanese fashion print of the costume in which the Mikado will receive the foreign ambassadors in his palace at Kyoto. It is of yellow, red and gold silk and is completed with a laquer headress and cloys. In the center is the Taka-Mikura, or ancient Japanese throne, in which the emperor and empress are crowned and in which the foreign notables are received. It contains no chairs and the emperor sits on the floor cross legged in true Japanese style. At the right is the coronation costume of the empress, an outer kimono of yellow silk magnificently embroidered, and skirt of dark crimson, with sleeves of different colors.

At the lower left is the Nijo Palace at Kyoto where many of the ceremonies take place. Next is the Emperor Yoshihito. The little picture shows the mared well at Kyoto from which the water to make the rice wine for the coronation banquets on November 15 and 17 is drawn.

At the extreme right is the Banzai Tower, in course of construction in Kyoto. This tower is commemorative of the coronation and will be left standing as a monument.

ROSENDALE.

Rosendale, Nov. 9.—Mrs. Dora Keator, who spent a few days the last week at her home in Kerhouson, has returned to this village.

Miss Emily Burnett of Port Ewen visited the union free school on Thursday.

Mrs. Walter Patterson of Newburgh spent a part of the week with friends in this village.

John P. McCabe brought the body of Eric Carlson to this village on Sunday. He died at the Kingston City Hospital on Sunday morning.

Roy Veder of Kingston called on friends here Monday.

Mrs. Silas Snyder, Mrs. Ralph LeFevre, Mrs. John Olney, Mrs. Keiser and Caroline Anderson were among those who visited "Kingston the past week."

Mrs. Charles Knecke has gone to New York city for a few days.

Master George Geuss of Kingston visited Arthur Hendricks and Bert Carney the past week.

Mrs. Samuel Van Tassel and Miss Dorothy returned to their home in Cornwall on Sunday.

Howard Manson has been confined to the house the past week. He is much better at present.

Miss Minnie Carney of Kingston spent the week end with her mother.

Mrs. William Douglass of Poughkeepsie spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Philip Triscell.

Mrs. Julia Geoffrey, who has been visiting her children in New York, returned home on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Mattman left on Sunday to spend a few days with relatives in New York city.

Earl Osterhout and Miss Helen Dockstader motored to Cornwall on Sunday.

Warren Saunders and wife were in Kingston on Monday.

Mrs. Elmer Plantz visited her sister, Mrs. Fred Fout, in Kingston, the past week.

Mrs. Howard Stearns still remains quite ill and is under the care of Dr. W. E. Little of Kingston.

The ladies of the Baptist Church are planning to serve a supper in the church parlors on Thursday evening, November 18.

Miss May Lefever of Kingston is visiting at her home in this village.

Mrs. Grant Russell, who has been quite sick, is slowly improving.

The missionary meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. George Northrip on Wednesday evening.

MT. MARION.

MT. MARION, Nov. 9.—The chicken supper and entertainment held in the church hall on November 4, proved to be a great success, for which the ladies of the church are to be congratulated, for their work and painstaking to "please all" there. The sketches "Married by the New Justice of the Peace" and "The Serrano Girl Problem" were great, also the Mt. Marion Band for the good music they furnished all through the evening. About one hundred and fifty were served, a large number of them from Saugerties, and the committee will long remember the groceryman of Saugerties for their donation of good things that go to make a chicken supper a success. Fifty-four ($54.00) was the result of the supper and the workers feel very proud.

BROOKLYN FIRE.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE.

BLAZING BROOKLYN BUILDING IN WHICH A SCORE OF WORKING GIRLS PERISHED.

(The picture shows the burning old five story brick building in Williamsburg, Brooklyn, in which a score of working girls perished in the fire on Saturday, and a hundred were severely injured while jumping to the sidewalk below.)

About 1,000 girls were working in the factory rooms of the Diamond Candy factory and the "Essex" Shirtwaist Company in the building when the fire broke out. The flames leaped up the narrow wooden stairways shutting off escape that way. Many of the windows along the fire escapes refused to work, and even when the girls reached the iron escapes on the front of the building, flames had licked through the windows and turned the escapes into blazing griddles. These fire escapes were covered with clothing which the girls had torn from their bodies in an effort to keep the fire from them and in their haste to escape, the flames. Many jumped, missing the nets in the street and were crushed to death on the sidewalks.

SATAN PETERBY

How a Soap Salesman Played a Joke on the Boys

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The four riders from the Twin Star ranch rode away from Red Spider postoffice and turned into the home ward trail.

"Jink," said Tony Goff, with a critical eye on the surrounding atmosphere, "where in thunder did you get that there cheroot of yours?"

Jink Prole flashed a forbidding eye at his familiar companion. "That there cheroot was given me by a perfect gentleman," he explained mildly.

Meaning the pie faced stranger we saw in the postoffice?" put in Jim Ray, meekly inquisitive.

"Nothing that he was pie faced more than usual," said Mr. Prole, blowing a cloud of blue smoke into the desert air.

"Not meaning to be inquisitive, I merely remark that he couldn't be no friend of yours to give you that smoke," complained Tony Goff.

"He meant well," soothed Jink, exhaling another odoriferous cloud of smoke. "He's coming over to the Twin Star this evening to sell us fellows some toilet articles."

"I thought so. Whenever I meet up with a punk and white pie faced dude with a sample case I sure know that he's selling toothbrushes or curling irons or eyelash restorers. I've got a good mind to give him a rattling order tonight, and then the next time one of them pests come along I can tell him I'm stocked a-plenty with face powder and hair dye and tell him to vamoose!" Tony sighed wearily and slapped the reins on the sleek neck of his horse.

The horse sprang forward, and in a second Tony and his three comrades were dicing toward the ranch in a mad race to see which one would be the first to reach the corral.

After supper that evening the cowboys were gathered about the doorway of the ranch house when there ambled into view a gentle white horse carrying a small, stout man, who was immaculately attired in pale gray clothes, with a broad brimmed felt hat of the same delicate hue. His shirt was of lavender silk and his necktie of a darker shade. From beneath his well pressed trousers there appeared lavender silk socks and tan colored, low cut shoes. On one white finger there burned a large diamond.

"Great cats!" whispered Mason Pepper in an awed tone. "If that there apparition is the result of selling sweet ness can be attained by purchasing one of our combination boxes," began the stranger in a silky, purring voice that he seemed to put on with the opening of the case. "This box contains toilet requisites for a year—shaving sticks, safety razor, powder, hair restorer (any color you might wish), freckle lotion, tooth powder, toothbrush, nail files, nail polish and corn plasters, bay rum, cologne water and any perfume you wish—a six ounce bottle in every combination box. There are also toilet soap, bath soap and bath powder and—"

"Stop!" moaned Mason Pepper faintly. "If I should put on all that there scented stuff I'd be shot out of Red Spider. I like a good, clean, healthy smell of tobacco."

"And I," murmured Mr. Goff reluctantly, "I like to wash myself with soap and be clean, but I sure dislike to advertise to my bring friends every time I perform my ablutions, which means just plain washing up," he added.

"You are not obliged to buy scented soap," urged the stranger patiently. "I've got a plain, unscented soap that you might like."

"I'm particularly looking for eyelash restorer," explained Tony earnestly. "I've had trouble with falling eyelashes ever since I had that terrible scare in Wildcat canyon."

The stranger shivered a little and glanced over his plump shoulder at the darkness behind.

"Wildcat canyon—that sounds rather dubious," he said, with a sickly smile. "I hope it doesn't lie along the road back to town."

"It's still there, right alongside the trail to Red Spider," said Tony heartlessly. "But it ain't to be feared now the way it used to be when Satan Peterby lived hereabouts."

The salesman started at the name. "Satan Peterby?" he questioned.

"Who is he?"

Tony settled back to enjoy himself. Before he made reply he rolled another cigarette and lighted it leisurely. When his sardonic smile was wreathed in smoke he proceeded to enlighten the nervous stranger.

"Satan Peterby was a daredevil cowboy who used to be the terror of Red Spider. When he was good he was terribly mild and good and just like the little girl in the rhyme—he wouldn't play poker then times or drink anything except plain soddy water, which same is like sassafras if you ever tasted it; he wouldn't shoot up the town as was his custom now and then, and nowadays there ain't so many Red Spiderites going around with clipped ears and holes in their hat crowns as there used to be in the days of Satan Peterby."

"When Satan was good he was most uncommon dull, but his companions didn't mind him. He was their idol; idle and lazy, too, if you don't mind a pun, stranger!"

"But when Satan Peterby was on the warpath—whoopie! Look out; there was something doing all the time, and poor Satan didn't know what he'd done all the day after it was all over. Sometimes he'd be up before a coroner's jury trying to explain about several corpses that was ornamenting the streets of Red Spider, and once he was assisting at a lynching bee—chief performer, too, I think. But he got away somehow."

"Oh, yes, he's seen around these parts now and then, else it's his spook. That's how I lost my eyelashes. I was riding along the edge of Wildcat canyon one night—just about such a night as this, only an hour later, it was—when, pop, out of the thicket there, comes a wild eyed little man—that was Satan Peterby, thank you!"

The stranger uttered a startled bleat and closed his sample case.

"Was that long ago?" he asked fearfully.

Mr. Goff surveyed his comrades with inquiry in his dancing eyes.

"Seems like it was most two weeks ago," he said reminiscently. "Boys, wasn't it two weeks ago that we saw the last of Satan Peterby?"

"It sure was," agreed Mason Pepper, rolling over and propping his chin in his cupped palms. "I'll never forget the sight of you standing against that cottonwood tree, Tony, and Satan using you for a target."

"A target?" repeated the stranger weakly.

Tony Goff nodded and took up the story.

"You see, I knew Satan Peterby well. He used to borrow money off of me every pay day till I got so I found out that he'd forget to pay it back. So when I stopped lending it to him he'd hold me up now and then for half a month's pay—and, by jinks, he'd get it too."

"Why?" asked the stranger, choking a little.

"Because he'd think nothing of shooting to kill if I refused. Once I offered to give him my note for thirty days in place of cash, and he riddled my new hat so full of bullet holes that it looked more like a fly trap than it did like a respectable eight dollar hat."

"This particular time I speak about I was riding home with just about $10 in my clothes when, as I say, out pops Satan Peterby. 'Hands up, Tony,' says he in that cold and deadly tone of his. You can guess how it sounded." Tony nodded at the salesman.

"Yes, I've read considerable western stories," murmured the other.

"Is that all?" he asked when I handed over the $10, and I shook in my boots when I says 'Yes,' you can bet."

"Well," says Satan Peterby, 'for that bit of carelessness, Tony, I'll shoot your eyelashes off one at a time, so say your prayers.'

"Of course praying didn't do any good then, with him already popping away at me. What saved my life, I don't know, stranger, but there wasn't one of them bullets hit me, only they come so close they just fanned the eye wipers off me, one at a time. Then, with a horrid laugh, Satan rode away. That's two weeks ago tonight, and he's due to ride again this evening."

"That so?" asked the stranger rising stiffly and sending a wide smile around the circle. "Then I better be getting along."

"But you haven't took our orders," protested Tony Goff, who was willing to pay for his evening's amusement. Whereupon the salesman, though apparently scared at the lonely ride before him, thrifflily took seven orders for combination boxes of toilet requisites and cheerfully received the cash in advance for same.

Then, Mason Pepper having brought around the ancient nag, the pie faced stranger turned his spectacled eyes once more around the company, smiled a pleasant good evening and disappeared in the darkness.

When they had ceased from their ecstasy of mirth over this adventure Tony Goff sat up and wiped his eyes.

"Speaking of Satan Peterby," he said, "I'd sure like to see that boy again. He was the finest puncher and the best man that ever threw a leg over a horse on this outfit!"

Out of the darkness behind them came a coldly sarcastic voice.

"Thank you, Tony. That remark just saved your worthless, no count life!"

"Satan Peterby himself!" yelled Tony, jumping up. "Come into the merry circle, pard! We sure thought you was rolling in riches in San Francisco!"

Into the circle stroled the rotund form of the pie faced stranger. While they stared at him he carelessly removed his flaxen wig and disclosed the dark hair of Satan Peterby, most gentle of cowboys and beloved by all his kind, despite the bad character that Tony had given him. With a handkerchief he quickly removed powder and paint from his tanned features, tossed his spectacles into the air and calmly put a bullet through each lens before he sat down in their midst.

Tony Goff and Mason Pepper eyed him with open mouth.

"Aunt's water than shooting eyelashes off," said Satan amiably.

The Ear's Delicate Organism.

Comparatively few persons thoroughly realize what a delicate and sensitive structure the human ear really is. That which we ordinarily designate so is after all, only the outer porch of a series of winding passages which, like the lobes of a great building, lead from the world without to the world within. Certain of these passages contain liquid, and their membranes are stretched like parchment curtains across the corridor at different places and can be thrown into vibrations or made to tremble like the head of a drum or as the surface of a tambourine does when struck with a stick or with the fingers. Between two or three parchment-like curtains a chain of very small bones extends, which serves to tighten or relax these membranes and to communicate vibrations to them. In the innermost places of all a row of white threads called nerves, stretches like the strings of a piano from the last point to which the tremblings or vibrations reach and pass inward to the brain.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

High Finance.

"Henry, dear," announced Mrs. Updote, "I guess you will have to admit that I am a pretty good business manager after all. I took Willie with me to the movies this afternoon, and as it was raining when we came out of the theater I gave Willie 10 cents car fare and had him hurry home and get an umbrella for me. In that way I saved my new hat from being ruined."

"The hubb!" replied Mr. Updote. "Yes, I see, my dear. But why the Sam Hill didn't you both ride home for your 10 cents in the first place?"

"Henry! You—boohoo—you never give me credit for anything I do."—Judge.

Ring Weighed a Pound.

One of the largest rings is the one which was presented to President Franklin Pierce in 1852 by some citizens of San Francisco. It weighed one pound. The hoop of the ring is cut into squares, on each of which was shown some scene in the history of California. The bezel, bearing the seal, has engraved upon it the arms of the state of California, surmounted by the stars and stripes of the United States, and the name of Franklin Pierce. This ring was valued at $2,000.—Washington Post.

GRAVEL ROADS IN IOWA.

Have Proved Satisfactory, as Is Exemplified by Greene County Highways.

The question of surfacing roads is being given more than the usual share of attention this year throughout the length and breadth of the corn belt because of the impassable condition of highways in many localities, due to the abnormal rainfall, says the Iowa Homestead. Automobile owners are literally up in arms over the present system of roadmaking, and of course in the corn belt these are numbered by the hundreds of thousands at the present time. The number is being rapidly supplemented by farmers, who are complaining of their inability to market produce under favorable conditions, and all in all, the agitation is directing special attention to ways and means of improving dirt roads in some other fashion than that of dragging them.

Because of the attention given to the subject it is interesting to turn to the example of one county in Iowa, where there are 100 miles of good gravel roads. This system of roadmaking, which has been in evidence in Greene county for many years, has given to that county a reputation which extends far beyond the boundary of the state.

In the making of these roads a good grade is first thrown up, and afterward an eight inch coating of gravel is placed in the center of the highway. It requires approximately 2,200 yards per mile of finished road, and most of this has been put in place at a cost of 75 cents per yard. This cost includes the leveling of the gravel to a width of eight feet in the center of the road, and in addition the amount mentioned will make a strip four inches deep, four feet wide on each side of the more heavily traveled strip. This means that sixteen feet of the highway is surfaced in such a way that it makes a firm roadbed one that will stand all reasonable traffic in all kinds of weather.

It is not herein intimated that the example of Greene county can be followed in every county, because of the lack of similar surfacing materials. However, the experience thus far in that county indicates that enthusiasm for surfacing roads very rapidly spreads. A ten mile strip will be graded this year, and satisfactory as this material has been there is some sentiment being created in the country favorable to the use of a more permanent material, such as concrete or brick. The supposed advantage of these materials over that of gravel is that for a series of years there will be no maintenance cost, whereas in the case of gravel there is more or less patching and repairing work required every season.

Precept and Example.

LEGION OF HONOR.

The French Order, Its Rank and Its Limits of Membership.

The Legion of Honor is a French order for the recognition of military and civil merit. Instituted by Napoleon while consul May 19, 1802, and inaugurated July 14, 1804. The decoration originally consisted of a star containing the portrait of Napoleon surrounded by a wreath of oak and laurel, with the legend, "Napoleon Empereur des Français" on the reverse was the French eagle with a thunderbolt in his talons and the legend, "Honneur et Patrie."

The order has been remodeled several times, the last occasion being subsequent to the downfall of the second empire. There are now five ranks or classes—ordinary chevaliers or knights, officers, commanders, grand officers, and grand crosses. The profuse granting of the decoration of the order latterly brought the institution into discredit, and the number of chevaliers is now restricted to 25,000, the officers to 4,000, the commanders to 1,000, the grand officers to 200 and the grand crosses to seventy.

The star now bears a figure emblematic of the republic, with the inscription, "Republique Française, 1870," on the reverse two dogs, with the inscription, "Honneur et Patrie."—Philadelphia Press.

USE OF OLIVE OIL.

Reasons Why It Should Have More Prominence in Cooking.

Americans are not generally speaking, liberal enough in the use of olive oil. It should occupy a more prominent place in cooking.

Any olive oil left in the pan after frying can be filtered through cheesecloth and kept in a cool place for future use. Olive oil can be used repeatedly. It should be hot before the article to be fried is placed in the pan.

Olive oil is capable of having the temperature raised to over 600 degrees before it burns. Butter burns at a little over 300, suet at about 300 and lard at 235. It will be seen that butter is a poor frying medium, as food must be kept at too low a temperature or it scorches, while with oil the high degree quickly cooks the outside of the article with a crust that prevents the oil from penetrating.

Rub the preserving kettle with olive oil to prevent fruit from burning. Use olive oil in recipes when possible where butter is called for. It is especially delicious in soft glaze bread, salad dressing and baked beans.—New York Sun.

Feet of a Cat.

There is nothing especially striking about the feet of a cat except its ability, always to land on them. Hold a young cat by its feet a short distance from the ground for a few seconds and then let go. The cat's back, being heavier than its feet, should strike the ground first. But it doesn't. Just as the cat is being let go it gives a quick upward thrust with its chest, and as the feet are freed they swing under it so it lands on them. In the case of the young cat that has never experienced this before, it is a little thing is going to be dropped. If it were a long drop there would be time to think, but in the short drop the cat must act, and act immediately. In fact, it is really forbidden. The natural conclusion, then, is that this faculty in the cat is located in its feet. It is inherent in them.—Atlanta Constitution.

Sharks' Eggs.

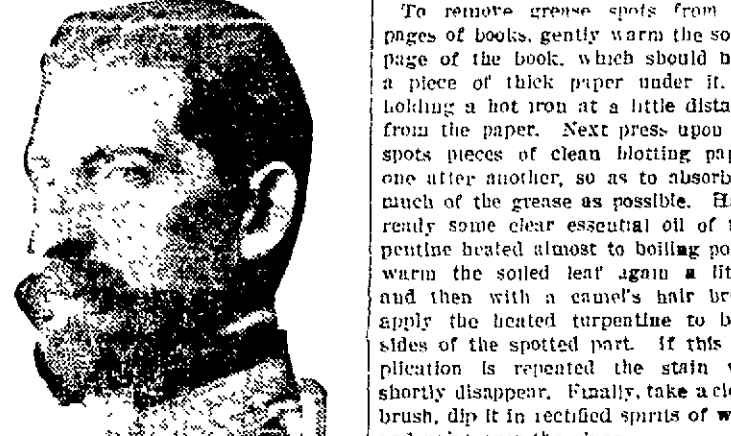

The eggs of fishes are usually small, soft and inconspicuous. The most remarkable point about them is the extraordinary number laid by the individual. A single cod lays as many as 9,000,000 eggs. Sharks lay eggs which are large in size, few as to numbers and are deposited singly instead of in masses. These eggs consist of a dark colored leathery envelope and are usually adorned with frills horns or long twisted tendrils. These appendages serve the purpose of keeping the egg case supported among the branches of seaweeds, thus preserving the embryo from the damage it would sustain were the egg carried hither and thither by the waves.—Scientific American.

Charles Lamb did not like May. Here is a fling of his against the merry month:

"I do not mind the utmost rigor of real winter," he wrote to Bernard Barton, "but these smiling hypocrites of May wither me to death. . . . What lies you poets tell about the May! It is the most infernal part of the year, cold crocuses and cold primroses; you take your blossoms in ice—a painted sun—" soap, I'll shake off the dust of these dignities right quick and buy a sample case."

"It's only Jink's pie faced stranger," assured Tony Goff pleasantly. "I'm 'arrible glad to see you, stranger," he said, rising and going to meet the drummer with exaggerated politeness. "None of us chaps are just aching to say up a lot of toilet stuff."

"That so?" inquired the drummer, with a pleased smile widening his generous lips. "I'm sure it will be a pleasure to take your orders."

"Oh, mush!" groaned Mason Pepper. The drummer dismounted in rather a painful manner and with entire unfettered respect for the old white horse which the Twin Star outfit recognized as the most ancient relic in the Red Spider livery stable.

Tony Goff fetched a pillow from the bunkhouse and set it on the ground for the saddle weary stranger, who sunk upon it with a grateful roll of his light eyes.

"You are kind indeed," he murmured rather mincingly as he set his sample case before him.

"Smoke!" asked Jink Prole, passing out a handful of black cigars.

The stranger eyed the deadly looking objects and shook his head. "Thank you, but this evening, gentlemen," he said, with a sickly grin. "I'm troubled with indigestion."

With that remark he opened his sample case and exhibited, cleverly concealed by straps and bands in the various compartments, an array of toilet articles as the riders of the Twin Star outfit had never gazed upon, such as they did not dream existed.

"The refinement of perfect cleanliness can be attained by purchasing one of our combination boxes," began the stranger in a silky, purring voice that he seemed to put on with the opening of the case. "This box contains toilet requisites for a year—shaving sticks, safety razor, powder, hair restorer (any color you might wish), freckle lotion, tooth powder, toothbrush, nail files, nail polish and corn plasters, bay rum, cologne water and any perfume you wish—a six ounce bottle in every combination box. MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Nov. 9.—The country person who bought a gold brick didn't feel half as badly after he discovered his error as Jawn McGraw does these days whenever he thinks about that "Pol" Peritt deal.

Jawn got a goldbrick in "Pol," which is bad enough. But the worst part of it, from the McGrawian viewpoint, is that Jawn spent hundreds of dollars and many anxious hours in trying to keep "Red" Oakes, the manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, from outbidding Jawn for the goldbrick.

This is the yarn: Peritt used to catch for the Salt Lake team and Jawn decided that he'd do a heap better in a Giant uniform. So at the end of the 1914 season Jawn entered into negotiations with Miller Huggins, the "Davis Harman" of baseball and Miller lived up to his nickname by letting Jawn have "Pol" for a considerable bit of booty.

Well, springtime came in due course, but "Pol" didn't come to the Giants. Instead, "Pol" began flitting outrageously with the Feds. Oakes wanted him. He asked "Pol" how much Jawn wanted to pay him and "Pol" told him:

"I'll boost that total $1,000 per season," said Oakes.

"Oh, every well I'm yours," quoth "Pol."

"Pol" left his home for the purpose of reporting to the Pittsburgh Feds. In the meantime, Jawn McGraw began to wonder why "Pol" didn't put into appearance at the Giants' camp. In the nick of time, as the diamond world put it, Jawn learned that "Pol" had been quite untrue to him; that he had been lured away by Federal coin.

Jawn got busy on the wires at once and learned that "Pol" was on his way to the Pittsburgh Feds' camp.

"Go, thou and head him off," wired Jawn to Dick Kinsella, the great ivory hunter, who was then in Mississippi.

"I want Peritt," said Kinsella. "Outbid the Feds!"

Kinsella jumped the first rather than he had learned, the Peritt route and headed off "Pol" somewhere in Georgia.

"Greetings, fair one, greetings," murmured Dick. "Union in and have some sarsaparilla or something."

"It was a warm day and Pol consented."

"Where ya goin'?" asked Dick, casual like, after the refreshments had been served.

"Oh, me? I'm goin' to the Pittsburgh Feds camp. I'm gonna play with them this season," responded "Pol."

"No, you ain't!" asserted Dick. "You're gonna play with the Giants."

"I ain't not remarked," "Pol" said, "I was figgerin' on doin' that 'white' ago, but I changed my mind. I gotta a right to change my mind when the other fellows offer me more money."

"How much more did they offer you?" queried Dick.

"Well, I'll beat that," said Dick. "And right then and there Dick is reported to have quoted 'Pol' a salary of $9,000 per year under a three year contract."

"The terms are suitable to me," quoth "Pol." "But before I move from this here spot I wanta know what Jawn McGraw thinks about 'em. If he fesses about it I'll go right along on my way to the Feds' camp."

Dick quickly got in touch with McGraw and told him what he'd quoted Peritt, reiterated Peritt's ultimatum, and Jawn quickly sanctioned the deal. After Dick concluded his conversation with McGraw he had Pol draw up the papers and after he had assured himself that the document was an iron-clad three year affair, Pol changed his route, headed away from Augusta, Ga., where the Oakes crowd was working out, and went along with Dick to the Martin camp of the Giants.

Peritt became a Giant at a reported salary of $9,000 a year, and this is what he did in 1915 to earn it: He worked 35 games and won but 12. He was knocked out of the box so often that everything he entered into the batting was 2 to 1 that he wouldn't last through the game. He wouldn't brand a baseball so weird that it became a joke around the circuit.

That's enough to make Jawn sorrowful, but the sadness increases when he recalls that he must keep "Pol" for two years longer—and pay him $9,000 for each of those years.

And, in the meantime—

COURT'S QUESTION IS EXCEPTED TO

And Justice Hasbrouck Promptly

Sustains It—Witnesses Contradictory on Whether Merritt Was Kicked When Evicted From Highland-New Paltz Trolley.

Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck took a hand now and then in examining witnesses on Monday afternoon in the trial of the suit of Arthur B. Merritt, a bank cashier of Highland, against the New Paltz, Highland and Poughkeepsie Traction Company for $5,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained when he was put off a trolley car on the night of November 12, 1913, for failure, as claimed by trolley employees, to pay a fare for riding farther from Highland than Pratt's Mills.

Ira Barnett of Goldenham, a passenger on the car, said Merritt and his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Rathgeb, the four constituting a party on the way to a social gathering in the Ford home located a few hundred yards beyond the first 5-cent trolley zone, stood in front of him and he heard the row and saw the ensuing scuffle.

When Merritt refused to pay a second fare, Conductor Palmateer of Lloyd tried to push him out the front entrance, but the young banker held to an overhead strap. The conductor then called to Motorman Wagner for aid and the latter pulled Merritt out on the platform. Merritt was not thrown off, as he and his witnesses claimed, asserted Barnett; he just stepped off. "Wagner did not kick him," said the witness, under questioning by the court.

Judge Hasbrouck—"How was Merritt's leg broken then?"

William D. Brinnier for the defendant company—"I object; the question is improper."

Judge Hasbrouck—"Yes; the objection is sustained."

Two Questions at Issue.

The case hinged on two questions: "Did Merritt and his party pay two-zone fares when they boarded the car?" "Was more force than necessary employed in evicting the plaintiff?"

Incidentally a question was raised by the defense as to whether Merritt sustained a fracture of both the small and large bones of his left leg, the result, he alleged, of having been kicked by Motorman Wagner.

Dr. Albert Lind, a practitioner in Highland for 21 years, to whose office Merritt was taken after the injury and who was called by the plaintiff, would not say there was a fracture of the large bone. Dr. Joseph Preston of Milton, with an experience as a practitioner of 29 years, said Merritt's injury is permanent.

Besides these two physicians and Dr. Townsend, a surgeon of Newburgh, the plaintiff's witnesses included only the quartet composing the social party.

Merritt Denies Having Hesitated.

The plaintiff denied that he, Conductor Palmateer put it up to him to pay or get off, he offered resistance. Under cross-examination by the defense he admitted that at the time he did he claim to the conductor the second zone fare had been paid.

Ira Barnett said he saw Motorman Wagner kick Merritt hard after the latter had been pulled out of the car. Plaintiff was then in a falling position.

Mrs. Merritt said her husband, when evicted from the car, fell at her feet beside the tracks. She saw the motorman kick him. When Merritt tried to get up, he fell again, exclaiming, "My legs are gone!"

Mrs. Rathgeb testified to the conductor, during the fare squabble, having said to Merritt: "Oh, I know you; you're a fresh guy!"

Motion to Dismiss Denied.

The plaintiff having rested, Mr. Brinnier moved that the case be dismissed. The court denied the motion, and the defense called Conductor Walter Palmateer as its first witness. He said the fares of the party were paid for only the first zone. They would not tell him how far they were going. At Pratt's Mills he gave them the alternative of paying another fare or getting off. He said Merritt resisted all the time he was being evicted. He denied having used unnecessary force.

Says Merritt Stepped Off.

Ferris Wager of Highland, the motorman, told of assisting the conductor to remove the plaintiff. He said when Merritt got to the steps he was standing up, and he stepped off sideways. He did not fall. Both the motorman and conductor denied having punched or kicked Merritt.

Charles DuBois of Poughkeepsie, a passenger, was asked by Mr. Brinnier:

"Why couldn't the conductor put Merritt off unaided?"

"I suppose he was not man enough," replied witness. Palmateer is below the medium in height and build.

Mrs. Florence Berean and her daughter, Blanche, aged 19, of Lloyd, gave corroborative testimony for the defense. Mrs. Berean told of the start of the row, but after that she "didn't look any more, because I knew there would be trouble."

Chauncey Markle, a former employee of the trolley company, now of Forest Glen, said he did not see Merritt make his exit because witness was shoved during the melee "and had to take care of himself."

An important witness for the defense not being at hand Monday evening, court adjourned at 6 o'clock until 9:30 this morning.

Jurors in the Case.

The jurors hearing the suit included Walter Bernard of Plattekill, Daniel J. Burke of Saugerties, Matthew Carman of Shawangunk, Andrew Cockfair of Esopus, William DuFon of Kingston, Lyman Felten of Saugerties, Charles Hughes of Wawarsing, Lewis Keger of Kingston, Frederick Euper of Kingston, Winfield R. Snyder of Saugerties, Lafayette Terpening of Esopus and Benjamin F. Winchell of Olive.

ANOTHER COLLEGE CAUGHT IN DRAGNET.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 9.—The net of professionalism has been spread over Howard Berry, the greatest all around athlete the University of Pennsylvania has, according to information reaching the Amateur Athletic officials here. Accusations against Berry, which are said to be in the hands of Secretary Frederick W. Rubien, of the Amateur Athletic Union in New York, allege that Berry played semi-professional baseball before he came to the University of Pennsylvania.

Last week Berry turned in his football suit after playing in the Pittsburgh game, saying that the coaches had kept him on the side lines most of the season, and then, putting him into the game at the last minute expected him to perform like a veteran. Berry was one of the most promising backfield men in the Penn football squad this year. He holds several athletic records, among them the javelin throw.

GLASCO.

Glasco, Nov. 8.—Dr. H. W. Turck, who has been afflicted with sciatica for some time, had the misfortune to fall and break his arm recently. His son, Louis, came up from New York and took his father back with him to the city.

Alterations have recently been made to the interior of the post office that are a decided improvement in appearance and convenience. Frank Scrivner did the work.

Thomas Nolan is yet seriously ill, but is said to be slightly improved.

Miss Myrtle Weeks was a Kingston visitor on Thursday.

Next Sunday will be temperance Sunday, and one week later, the 21st, will be "Go to Church" Sunday. Both will be observed at the M. E. Church here.

Mr. and Mrs. Verdi Lasher and Miss Margaret Hommel of Mount Airy, were guests of Mrs. Edward Lasher on Sunday.

Three marriages on Sunday is "going some" for a small town like Glasco.

Mrs. Henry Fuller has returned from a week's visit in New York and Brooklyn.

An Old Fashioned Ball.

Eight hands around, balance all, swing your partner, is the style of dancing that will take place at the old fashioned ball of St. Peter's Sick and Aid Society, Wednesday evening, November 10. Per Tannenbaum.

St. 1st mir Allis Eins, Zu Lauterbach, will comprise some of the waltz music. A good old time is assured all who attend.

Veteran Gateman Retires.

Stephen Harding, who has been employed as gateman at the West Point crossing of the West Shore railroad for many years, has retired from active service, having been placed on the pension list by the railroad company. He had been in the employ of the West Shore since the railroad was built, about thirty-five years ago.
